

The clause: complements

RODNEY HUDDLESTON

- 1 Elements of clause structure: an overview 215
  - 1.1 Types of complement and canonical clause structures 216
  - 1.2 Complements vs adjuncts 219
- 2 Semantic roles 228
  - 2.1 Some preliminary issues 228
  - 2.2 Some major semantic roles 230
  - 2.3 Subject and direct object selection in canonical transitive clauses 233
- 3 The subject 235
  - 3.1 Distinctive grammatical properties of the subject 236
  - 3.2 Subject in non-canonical clauses 239
    - 3.2.1 The passive and preposing constructions 239
    - 3.2.2 The extraposition and existential constructions 241
    - 3.2.3 Subject–auxiliary inversion and subject postposing 243
- 4 Direct and indirect objects 244
  - 4.1 The object in canonical monotransitive clauses 245
  - 4.2 Object and extraposed object 247
  - 4.3 Ditransitive clauses 248
- 5 Predicatives and related elements 251
  - 5.1 Distinctive syntactic properties of PCs 253
  - 5.2 Location, goal, and source 257
  - 5.3 Obligatory and optional predicatives 261
  - 5.4 Classification of verbs taking predicative complements 263
  - 5.5 Copular clauses 266
    - 5.5.1 Ascriptive and specifying uses of be 266
    - 5.5.2 Formal differences between ascriptive and specifying copular clauses 268
- 6 Special verb + preposition combinations 272
  - 6.1 Prepositional verbs 274
    - 6.1.1 Comparison between constructions with specified and unspecified prepositions 275
    - 6.1.2 Constructions containing prepositional verbs 277
  - 6.2 The ‘verb – particle – object’ construction 280
  - 6.3 Verbal idioms containing intransitive prepositions 283
    - 6.3.1 Lexicalisation and fossilisation 283
    - 6.3.2 Constructions containing verb + intransitive preposition idioms 286
  - 6.4 Verbal idioms containing NP + transitive preposition 288
  - 6.5 Other types of verbal idiom 289

- 7 Light verbs 290
  - 7.1 General issues 290
  - 7.2 Survey of the main light verbs 293
- 8 Verbs with multiple patterns of complementation 296
  - 8.1 Transitive/intransitive contrasts 298
    - 8.1.1 Type I 298
    - 8.1.2 Type II 300
    - 8.1.3 Type III 300
    - 8.1.4 Type IV 306
  - 8.2 Ditransitive/monotransitive contrasts 308
    - 8.2.1 Type I 308
    - 8.2.2 Type II 312
    - 8.2.3 Type III 312
    - 8.2.4 Type IV 313
  - 8.3 Further core/non-core contrasts 313
    - 8.3.1 Type I 313
    - 8.3.2 Type II 318
    - 8.3.3 Type III 319
    - 8.3.4 Type IV 319
  - 8.4 Contrasts between separate complements and a single combined complement 320