THE MESOLITHIC AGE IN BRITAIN

By J. G. D. CLARK. With 60 plates, 2 maps, and numerous figures in the text. Crown 4to. 15s. net.

This book deals with a period undistinguished by archaeology until the close of the nineteenth century, and hitherto almost unrecognised in British archaeology. Many of the discoveries incorporated in the work are of post-war origin, and not a few are here published for the first time. In so far as they help to elucidate the British material, the results of Continental workers have been utilised, but an over-elaborate systematisation of evidence necessarily incomplete has not been attempted. It is hoped that this book will do something to bridge the gap between the close of Pleistocene times and the penetration of Neolithic culture into Britain. The illustrations should be of especial value to students.

SAINT MICHAEL'S MOUNT

By the Rev. T. TAYLOR.

Crown 8vo. With 10 illustrations. 7s. 6d. net.

A short account of the history of St Michael's Mount intended for the general reader. It should interest all Cornishmen and all who visit the Mount on their holidays. The writer sets forth his story under two heads, religious and secular. While examining the old legends he insists that the book is history, not romance, and is based solely on documentary evidence. There is a chapter on the vexed question whether St Michael's Mount is the 'Ictis' of Classical writers. Several documents of great interest are printed in the Appendix. The author is Hon. Canon of Truro and Vicar of St Just in Penwith.
