A History of Greek Philosophy Volume II :

The Presocratic Tradition from Parmenides to Democritus

W. K. C. GUTHRIE

Professor Guthrie completes his study of the Presocratic tradition. He groups together men who were interested in the same things, distinguishing between the natural and moral philosophers. Thus the central problems concern the relation between matter and life. 75s. net

The Pursuit of Certainty

SHIRLEY LETWIN

In this study of Hume, Bentham, J. S. Mill and Beatrice Webb, Mrs Letwin traces the development of thought about the nature of political activity and government in the last two centuries. She examines the philosophical and legal problems involved.

Equality and Power

R. V. SAMPSON

'I do find Dr. Sampson's argument for moral absolutism really challenging, and his study of inequality in human affairs is a refreshing contribution . . . This is much too good a book to be ignored.'

David Hume

Prophet of the Counter-
Revolution

LAURENCE L. BONGIE

The author studies various Ancien Régime reactions to Hume's historical writings and examines informally the significant role played by English Civil-war history in the formulation of French revolutionary and counter-revolutionary thought. 35s net

Forms and Limits of Utilitarianism

DAVID LYONS

Moral philosophers have long sought to reconcile Utility and Obedience to rules; the most recent result of their efforts is rule-utilitarianism. This book is a critique of the main forms of utilitarianism. 45s net

The Metaphysics of Descartes

A Study of the Meditations

L. J. BECK

In this work the metaphysical doctrine of Descartes is unfolded in a logical analysis following strictly the order of argument which alone demonstrates the systematic unity of the Cartesian doctrine. 50s net

MARXISM
AND THE LINGUISTIC
PHILOSOPHY
Maurice Cornforth

A well-known Marxist writer examines the train of thought which has led to the present preoccupation of philosophers with questions about language. He makes a positive as well as critical assessment of the "linguistic" methods, and re-examines Marxist philosophy in the light of modern logic.

Thinking about Thinking

JOAN WYNN REEVES

Reader in Psychology at Bedford College, London

Maurice Cranston writes:

"I feel this book is particularly welcome, in that it treats the question of thinking as a whole. There have been many books and monographs on different forms of thinking; but the merit of this book seems to lie in the fact that it combines a philosophical with a psychological approach, in a manner which is no longer altogether fashionable, but which has worked out in this case extremely well. The book also provides an excellent account of the theories of Locke, Spinoza, Freud and Binet. I think the book ought to appeal to a wide class of readers, as it combines expertness in the most advanced psychological methods with a wide range of curiosity which is characteristic of the classical authors."
