SINCE ITS INCEPTION IN 1990, the Journal of Democracy has become an influential international forum for scholarly analysis and competing democratic viewpoints. Focusing exclusively on democracy, the Journal monitors and analyzes democratic regimes and movements in scores of countries around the world. Published quarterly in January, April, July, and October for the National Endowment for Democracy.

October 1996 (Volume 7, Number 4) includes:

- The Myth of Global Ethnic Conflict
- How Different Are Postcommunist Transitions?
- Venezuela: Democracy Hangs On
- China’s Constitutionalist Option
- Indonesia: Suharto’s Tightening Grip
- Vietnam’s Tentative Transformation
- Burma’s Uneven Struggle
- Soft Authoritarianism in Malaysia and Singapore
- Making Amends After Communism
- Reform and Frustration in Egypt
- Kant, Democracy, and History
- Debate: Democratic Consolidation
  I. O’Donnell’s “Illusions”: A Rejoinder
  II. Illusions and Conceptual Flaws
- Books in Review: Two Views of Liberalism
  Latin America’s Parties

Democracy and the Global Order
From the Modern State to Cosmopolitan Governance
David Held

"I regard this book as indispensable reading for scholars and citizens alike—a comprehensive rethinking and remapping of the terrain of democracy."
—Richard Falk, Princeton University

Industrial Policy, Technology, and International Bargaining
Designing Nuclear Industries in Argentina and Brazil
Etel Solingen

This book highlights the conceptual utility of relying on macropolitical consensus and lateral autonomy for understanding industrial policy, international bargaining, and technological development, via an unprecedented systematic and multidisciplinary comparison of the Brazilian and Argentine nuclear industries.

$47.50 cloth

The Face of the Nation
Immigration, the State, and the National Identity
Keith Fitzgerald

This innovative work provides both a historical account of the crazy-quilt of legislation dealing with immigration that Congress has passed over the years and a theoretical explanation, building on the "new institutionalism," of how these laws came to be passed. The author shows why immigration is a policy arena in which a polity chooses what it will be.

American Images of China, 1931-1949
T. Christopher Jespersen
This book shows how the notion of the Chinese as aspiring Americans helped shape American opinion and policies toward Asia for almost twenty years. This notion derived less from the reality of Chinese historical or cultural similarities than from a projection of American values and culture; in the American view, fueled by various political, economic, and religious interests, China was less a geographical entity than a symbol of American hopes and fears.

Calamity and Reform in China
State, Rural Society, and Institutional Change Since the Great Leap Famine
Dali L. Yang
“This is a very impressive achievement. What is so good about it is the theoretical and statistical sophistication, the emphasis on regional variation, and the learning it displays, not only with regard to China but in general. It contains much new material of enormous value.”
—Thomas P. Bernstein, Columbia University

Global Space and the Nationalist Discourse of Modernity
The Historical Thinking of Liang Qichao
Xiaobing Tang
This book reexamines the historical thinking of Liang Qichao (1873-1929), one of the few modern Chinese thinkers and cultural critics whose appreciation of the question of modernity was based on first-hand experience of the world space in which China had to function as a nation-state.

Tethered Deer
Government and Economy in a Chinese County
Marc Blecher and Vivienne Shue
This is the first systematic, longitudinal study of the organization and operations of Chinese government at the county level. Highlighting the relationships between county officials and the administrative and production units above and below them, the authors open a window on the vast bureaucratic middle ground between Beijing policymaking and community-level politics.

THE PACIFIC REVIEW is now in its tenth year and a major success. It provides an important platform for the study of the Pacific basin and an interdisciplinary forum for the exchange of ideas on this important region.

As well as its customary analysis of international relations and security issues, THE PACIFIC REVIEW is now expanding its coverage to provide enhanced economic analysis of the Pacific area. It will feature articles at the interface of the economic and the political, and will include papers from other relevant disciplines—such as contemporary history, geography and sociology.

Fully refereed, THE PACIFIC REVIEW continues to provide fast and forceful commentary on immediate policy issues.

EUROPEAN JOURNAL OF International Relations

Published under the auspices of the Standing Group on International Relations of the European Consortium for Political Research (ECPR)

Edited by Walter Carlsnaes Uppsala University

"The establishment of a specifically European journal of international relations must surely be welcome." Times Higher Education Supplement

The European Journal of International Relations is dedicated to the stimulation and dissemination of research and scholarship in International Relations throughout the academic community in all parts of Europe and beyond. It pays special attention to conceptual, normative and formal theories, seeking in particular to foster an awareness of methodological and epistemological questions in the study of International Relations. It reflects research and developments of both a theoretical and an empirical nature in the major sub-areas of the field, including Foreign Policy Analysis, International Organization, Strategy and Conflict, International Law and International Political Economy.

Published since 1951 by the International Political Science Association (all back volumes are available), the Abstracts is a major source of bibliographic information in political science. It publishes abstracts of articles in specialized and non specialized periodicals, including major yearbooks. Articles in English are abstracted in English; those in other languages (about one fourth of the total) are abstracted in French, with all titles translated into English. In 1996 it published 7,130 abstracts from nearly 1,000 journals, in six issues. Each issue carries a detailed subject index and a list of the periodicals examined. The final issue of each volume provides a cumulative subject index and an author index.

"This excellent study seeks to articulate the policies of cooperative security and economic multilateralism necessary in America’s ‘third attempt’ at establishing world order in the twentieth century. [WINNING THE PEACE] ranks among the best of recent attempts to describe the lineaments of the world order the United States and its partners should build in the future."
—David C. Hendrickson, Foreign Affairs

"John Ruggie’s WINNING THE PEACE puts the years since the end of the cold war in their proper historical context. Notwithstanding popular catchphrases, world affairs are never orderly in practice. Yet, with Ruggie’s insight, we can at least bring some structure to how we perceive the world."

The Miller Center Journal continues to provide fresh perspectives by scholars and practitioners in three major areas: the presidency, governance, and foreign views of American governance. Our readers have praised both the scholarly depth of the Journal as well as its readability.

Our volumes have studied the presidency with such contributions as a biographical essay about Bill Clinton by David Maraniss of The Washington Post; an article on the Reagan administration by Frank Carlucci, former United States Secretary of Defense and Ambassador to Portugal; an interview with Lloyd Cutler, former Counsel to the president; and remarks by Herbert Brownell about being the Attorney General of the United States.

The Journal has addressed governance with essays on the budget deficit and national debt by Alan Murray, the Bureau Chief of the Washington Bureau of The Wall Street Journal; the ethics of intervention by Alberto Coll of the Naval War College; American Federalism by Martha Derthick of the University of Virginia; and other topics.

Andrew Goodpaster, retired General of the United States Army and former Supreme Allied Commander, Europe, has contributed an article on U.S.-Russian relations to the Journal’s discourse on foreign views of governance. Other contributions have included essays like Hugh Sidey’s reflections on presidential character and R.W. Apple’s comments on the Gulf War.

Your subscription to the Miller Center Journal will engage your mind with substantive and probing articles on timely and important issues of American governance. Subscribe today!

THE WORLD REACTS TO THE HOLOCAUST

David S. Wyman, Editor
Charles H. Rosenzveig, Project Director

Sponsored by the Holocaust Memorial Center, The World Reacts to the Holocaust is a major new compendium that chronicles in one volume the impact of the Holocaust in twenty-two countries and the United Nations. Country-by-country, the volume carefully traces specific and widespread responses to the Holocaust, beginning with the prewar status of Jews in each country, and moving to the attitudes and perceptions of 1945 and the political, economic, and cultural legacies reaching down to the present.

"Unique historical circumstances affected each country's behavior during the war and the Holocaust. These circumstances, coupled with wartime experiences, influenced how each country has reacted to the Holocaust over time. Some have denied the Holocaust, some have denationalized it, some have trivialized it, some have rationalized it, all have universalized it. Some countries have adopted every one of these positions in the period since 1945."

The Journal of Policy Reform

Edited by
Arvind Panagariya, University of Maryland at College Park, USA and
Dani Rodrik, Harvard University, USA

The Journal of Policy Reform serves as the primary outlet for analytical work on policy reform in developing and transitional economies. All areas of policy reform are examined, including: privatization and restructuring; tax and financial sector reform; the environment; and the world trading system. Submission of all forms of work is encouraged, but applied theoretical analyses, econometric and other empirical work, country studies, and political economy analyses are particularly welcome.

CIVIL-MILITARY RELATIONS AND DEMOCRACY
edited by Larry Diamond and Marc F. Plattner

The end of the Cold War and the global advance of democracy have significantly altered both the external and internal security environments for many of the world's militaries. Under these new conditions, how will civil-military relations affect efforts to consolidate new democracies in developing and post-Communist countries? How should governments go about establishing civilian control of the armed forces or limiting military intervention in politics?

WITNESSES TO THE END OF THE COLD WAR
edited by William C. Wohlfarth

Why did the Cold War end so peacefully, and so suddenly? In February 1993, key diplomatic players—including former U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz and former Soviet foreign minister Alexander Bessmertnykh—gathered at Princeton University to exchange views on the transition to the post-Cold War world. Here are collected the complete transcripts of this historic three-day conference, supplemented by incisive interpretive essays.

PRESIDENTIAL INSTITUTIONS AND DEMOCRATIC POLITICS
Comparing Regional and National Contexts
edited by Kurt von Mettenheim

Presidential Institutions and Democratic Politics offers in-depth analyses of the dangers and benefits to democracy of presidential systems in the United States, Europe, and Latin America. Although political scientists have long acknowledged parliamentary government as essential for stable democracy, contributors to this volume argue that the presidential system, which separates and diffuses power, can provide new perspectives for leaders in emerging democracies around the world.

Wars are fought for territory and power. Most of today’s wars are civil wars fought to preserve ethnic or religious identity, as a response to poverty, or to redress history. The unique format of The State of War and Peace Atlas gives shape and meaning to the statistics about volatile areas of the world and provides a global overview on such key issues as:

- international terrorism
- landmines and military dumping grounds
- arsenals and the arms trade
- military spending and nuclear testing
- NATO and the UN

The State of War and Peace Atlas begins by enumerating the painful costs of war—death tolls, the plight of refugees, the collapse of whole states—and closes on a tentative note of hope by mapping the world of peace diplomacy and our global peacekeeping processes.

Intentionally excluded from formal politics in authoritarian states by reigning elites, do the common people have concrete ways of achieving community objectives? Contrary to conventional wisdom, this book demonstrates that they do. Focusing on the political life of the sha'b (or popular classes) in Cairo, Diane Singerman shows how men and women develop creative and effective strategies to accomplish shared goals, despite the dominant forces ranged against them.

"Political anthropology of a high order. Singerman shows how family ties empower people. . . . As a social scientist, she is determined to challenge the stereotype of the passive urban poor, and she makes a largely successful case for seeing politics in other than elite terms."
