character. Whether the patient can survive the success of this operation remains to be seen. If you agree with Erdozain, however, this may be the arena where the battles of ‘secularisation’ (if we can still use that word) are likely to be fought out. If you do not, you will still do well to find a more provocative and thoughtful recent book on how western, secular modernity came to be the way it is.

The Eusebius Essay Prize
The World Christianities Essay Prize

The Journal now offers two annual essay prizes of £500 apiece. The Eusebius Essay Prize is awarded to the best essay submitted on a subject connected with any aspect of early Christian history, broadly understood as including the first seven centuries AD/CE. Scholars of any relevant discipline (theology, classics, late antique studies, Middle Eastern Studies etc.) are encouraged to enter the competition. The new World Christianities Essay Prize, now offered for the first time, will be awarded to the best essay submitted on any aspect of the history of Christianity beyond Europe and North America since the year 700, and is likewise open to scholars of any relevant discipline. Both competitions are open to scholars regardless of seniority, although submissions from junior scholars are particularly welcomed. Submissions for either prize should not exceed 8,000 words, including footnotes. Submissions should be made by 30 September 2017 (for the Eusebius prize) or 31 March 2018 (for the World Christianities prize): the winning essays will be published in the Journal, probably in the numbers appearing in July 2018 (Eusebius) and January 2019 (World Christianities). Other submissions entered into the competition may also be recommended for publication. The editors reserve the right not to award either prize if no essay of sufficient quality is submitted. All essays should be sent by email attachment (with the name of the relevant prize in the subject line), prepared to Journal style, to Mrs Mandy Barker at jeh@robinson.cam.ac.uk doi:10.1017/S0022046917000690