Christian Bailey is Assistant Professor of History at Purchase College, State University of New York. He completed his PhD at Yale University in 2009 before moving to the Max Planck Institute for Human Development, where he was a postdoctoral researcher with the History of Emotions group until 2011. Since then he has been lecturer in history at Balliol College, Oxford and at The Open University and Visiting Assistant Professor at Binghamton University in New York. His first book, Between Yesterday and Tomorrow: German Visions of Europe, 1926–1950 (Berghahn Books, 2013) focused on German ideas for integrating Europe in the mid-twentieth century. He has since turned to the history of emotions, publishing on the history of honour in Britain and Germany, changing conceptions of emotions in European encyclopaedia since the eighteenth century and German concepts of emotions and civilisation during the age of high imperialism. He is currently writing a book on love between Jews and other Germans from the 1870s to the 1960s.

Rita Almeida de Carvalho is a postdoctoral fellow at the Institute of Social Sciences of the University of Lisbon. Her research interests include the interwar fascist and authoritarian regimes. She has written A Condordata de Salazar (Temas e Debates, 2013). She is currently working on transferences among fascist intellectuals.

His research focuses on the relations between Iberia and Germany during the Cold War. He has published articles on migration and transnational party cooperation and two books, El amigo alemán. El SPD y el PSOE de la dictadura a la democracia (RBA Libros S.A., 2012) and Von Franco-Diktatur zur Demokratie. Die Tätigkeit der Friedrich-Ebert-Stiftung in Spanien (J.H.W. Dietz, 2013). Currently, he is carrying out research on Portuguese and Spanish forced workers in Germany during the Second World War, the West German military base in Beja (Portugal) and the involvement of the Friedrich Ebert Foundation in the Carnation Revolution.
James Robertson is Assistant Professor of Politics and History at Woodbury University. He completed his Ph.D. in Modern European History at New York University in 2014 and his BA in History and Philosophy at the University of Sydney.

Andrew Tompkins is a postdoctoral researcher at the Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin. His DPhil thesis will soon be appearing with Oxford University Press under the title Better Active than Radioactive! Anti-Nuclear Protest in 1970s France and West Germany. His current research project is focused on transnational relationships after the Second World War along the borders between France and West Germany on the one hand and Poland and East Germany on the other. From 2016 he will be a Lecturer in Modern History at the University of Sheffield.

Central European History offers articles, review essays, and book reviews that range widely through the history of Germany, Austria, and other German-speaking regions of Central Europe from the medieval era to the present. All topics and approaches to history are welcome, whether cultural, social, political, diplomatic, intellectual, economic, and military history, as well as historiography and methodology. Contributions that treat new fields, such as post-1945 and post-1989 history, maturing fields such as gender history, and less-represented fields such as medieval history and the history of the Habsburg lands are especially desired.

International Review of Social History is one of the leading journals in its field. Truly global in its scope, it focuses on research in social and labour history from a comparative and transnational perspective, both in the modern and in the early modern period, and across periods. The journal combines quality, depth and originality of its articles with an open eye for theoretical innovation and new insights and methods from within its field and from contiguous disciplines. Besides research articles, it features surveys of new themes and subject fields, a suggestions and debates section, review essays and book reviews.

Journal of Global History addresses the main problems of global change over time, together with the diverse histories of globalization. It also examines counter-currents to globalization, including those that have structured other spatial units. The journal seeks to transcend the dichotomy between ‘the West and the rest’, straddle traditional regional boundaries, relate material to cultural and political history, and overcome thematic fragmentation in historiography. The journal also acts as a forum for interdisciplinary conversations across a wide variety of social and natural sciences.
Urban History occupies a central place in historical scholarship, with an outstanding record of interdisciplinary contributions, and a broad-based and distinguished panel of referees and international advisors. Each issue features wide-ranging research articles covering social, economic, political and cultural aspects of the history of towns and Cities. Urban History is leading the way in academic publishing with its multimedia companions. The companions are refereed and fully linked and provide real depth to research. Online subscribers also gain access to Urban History’s comprehensive online bibliography, which contains 34,000 searchable items including books, articles and edited collections.
