

between the traditional hospital-centred modes of care and that of the community-based prototype. We then divided into groups to discuss the various pros and cons of our new life-style, following which the nominated group chairperson presented the distilled wisdom of their team. Inevitably, more attention was given to potential disadvantages rather than benefits. It was thought that possible problem areas included inadequate supervision from consultants, the relegation of our role within the multidisciplinary community team to that of "pill-pusher", the demoralising effects of diluted peer group interaction, along with a host of organisational difficulties. Will the community-based consultancy of the future be a less attractive proposition, with the potential for harming recruitment into the psychiatric ranks? A show of hands indicated that some 60–70% of trainees shared this anxiety, and it is noteworthy that of the remainder the majority abstained on the basis of insufficient evidence. Concluding, the Chairman noted a "worrying negativity" – fair comment indeed.

Due largely to the quality of the speakers and the efforts of the chairpersons, the day proved a stimulating experience and, by common consent, a great success. We would like to thank all those who conspired to make it so and E. Merck Limited, who provided an excellent lunch.
