APRIL 1985 SPECIAL FEATURE

Donard Britten on Teacher training in ELT (Part 1)

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Language Teaching

The international abstracting journal for language teachers and applied linguists

(formerly Language Teaching & Linguistics : Abstracts) now offers

- 20 % greater coverage
- increased emphasis on teaching methods and materials
- comprehensive coverage of the field for its readers in a compact and inexpensive form

Our Readership

- Practising teachers, teacher trainers, applied linguists, students, research workers, writers, educational administrators . . . in fact everyone concerned with the teaching and learning of foreign languages (including English as a foreign or second language)

Our Aims

- To help people concerned with the teaching and learning of languages keep up to date with the latest findings in research, language studies, applied linguistics and linguistics which are of professional interest
- To pass on information about good practice in classroom teaching and effective language learning, as well as the relevant findings of educational researchers
- To encourage cross-fertilisation of ideas between those concerned with the teaching of different foreign languages (e.g. French, German, English) as well as between practising teachers, applied linguists and educational researchers

What we offer

- Abstracts in English of articles selected by experts from some 400 journals from all parts of the world, as soon as possible after publication
- An original and authoritative article in each issue surveying the current state of the art in an important area of work. Each is up to 7,000 words long, contains a full bibliography and should interest both informed specialists and those looking for an up-to-date introduction to the field
- Short, informative and objective annotations of recent publications, together with a list of books received
- Information on where to find substantial bibliographies on particular topics
- Details of research projects in progress in various countries

How we produce the Abstracts

The editor, members of the editorial board and CILT staff examine some 400 journals taken by the Language Teaching Libraries and select the most significant articles which

- break new ground
- clarify a problem area
- give a useful review of earlier work
- report important research findings
- present new and useful classroom methods and materials

Most of the abstracts are specially written by the editor and a team of abstractors, who are usually teachers or lecturers in the subjects concerned.

*The British Council and
The Centre for Information on Language Teaching & Research (CILT)*

The British Council and CILT both maintain the language-teaching libraries (addresses are given below). The libraries contain over 25,000 volumes and subscribe to some 400 periodicals, including those from which the articles abstracted in this journal are taken. All articles abstracted may be consulted in one or other of the libraries. (Requests for photocopies – see preface.) The libraries also compile specialised bibliographies on various aspects of language teaching and research, and stock British Council and CILT publications. They have extensive holdings of published courses and teaching materials with facilities for hearing and viewing non-book components. A register of research relevant to language teaching is available for reference.
