Great Britain and the Origins of the Pacific War

A Study of British Policy in East Asia 1937-1941

Peter Lowe

'Peter Lowe uses all the old-fashioned courtesies But, beneath their velvet cloak, he is clad in the complete steel of a scholar who has mastered his subject, and yet is capable of explaining lucidly what he has discovered.' The Economist.

The Banyan Tree

Overseas Emigrants from India, Pakistan and Bangladesh

Hugh Tinker

'It is a fascinating book. It bristles with useful statistics.' The Times Literary Supplement. 'Mr Tinker covers an enormous amount of ground in quite a short space. He manages to provide an accurate and clear account of a very large number of events and puts them into their local context I would wholeheartedly recommend this book to anyone seriously interested in getting a serious perspective on many of our current racial and political problems throughout the world.' British Book News. £5

Sulu and Sabah

A Study of British Policy towards the Philippines and North Borneo from the late Eighteenth Century

Nicholas Tarling

Based largely on British documents, this book examines the making of British policy towards the Sulu-Sabah region, and throws light on British attitudes towards other Europeans in the area and towards the indigenous states. It also makes a contribution to the study of the Malay sultanates and their reactions to the West.

A History of Singapore 1819-1975

C. M. Turnbull

This book traces the history of Singapore from 1819, when the East India Company established a trading settlement on the island, to 1975, the end of Singapore's first decade as an independent state. Based on government records, newspapers, private papers, and secondary works, it provides the first full-scale history of Singapore and examines both official policy and activity, and economic and social aspects. The Price of Progress in a Japanese Village, 1951–1975

Robert J. Smith. Returning in 1975 to a remote village he had first studied in 1951, the author found the quality of life there drastically altered, not only by the advent of television and modern gadgets but by the decline of the religious observances, social customs, and family relationships that had once given the village a strong sense of community. Through accounts of the histories of several families, as well as a close look at virtually all aspects of village life, the author explores the circumstances that led to these far-reaching changes, concluding with an account of a bitter 1973 dispute that split the village into antagonistic factions in a way that could not have happened twenty-five years earlier. $15.00

A New Cambridge History

THE CAMBRIDGE HISTORY OF CHINA

Edited by JOHN K. FAIRBANK

Emeritus Professor of History, Harvard University and DENIS TWITCHETT

Professor of Chinese, University of Cambridge

This latest Cambridge History is one of the most far-reaching works of international scholarship ever undertaken and it will open a new era in the understanding of the Chinese past. Planned to be complete by the mid-1980s, it will extend to fourteen volumes and will explore the main developments in political, social, economic and intellectual life from the Ch'in Empire (pre-200 BC) to the present day. The contributors are specialists from the international community of sinological scholars. Many of their accounts break new ground; all are based on fresh research.

Volume 10: Late Ch'in 1800-1911,
Part 1

Edited by JOHN K. FAIRBANK

Volume 10, the first to be published, covers the period from 1800 to about 1870 when the Western world first made a profound impact on China. The period was characterised by the dynastic decline of the Ch'in Empire and by domestic revolt, culminating in the Taiping rebellion. The authors survey the Opium War and the treaty system whereby the victorious Western powers occupied the principal ports. Central Asian developments are also studied, as is the successful restoration of imperial power following the collapse of the Taiping forces. Numerous maps illustrate the text and each chapter has a separate bibliographical essay. £30.00 net

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Modern Asian Studies is concerned with the history, geography, politics, sociology, literature, economics and social anthropology of South Asia, South-East Asia, China and Japan.

Contributions should be based on original research or field-work. They should be between 2000 and 8000 words long. Two typed copies should be submitted. Each author will receive twenty-five free offprints of his article and a copy of the Journal in which it appears.

Submission of an article will be taken to imply that it has not been previously published and that it is not on offer to any other publisher. In the interests of authors, copyright is normally assigned to Cambridge University Press. The editor welcomes expression of all shades of opinion, but responsibility for them rests with their authors.

All correspondence should be addressed to Dr Gordon Johnson, Selwyn College, Cambridge CB3 9DQ, England.
