Professor William Chester Jordan, Director

Corruption

In the academic year 1998-99 the Shelby Cullom Davis Center will have "corruption" as the theme of its conferences and weekly seminars. Changing definitions and perceptions of corruption will be addressed, of course, but the Committee of the Davis Center also envisages papers focussing either on individual scandals and their implications or on systemic analyses, employing techniques from other disciplines besides history, of corruption in government, politics, business, and scientific research. Papers that deal with questions like statebuilding or the relationship between the privatization of power and of the economy, on the one hand, and corruption, on the other, would also be welcome. Moral corruption and the metaphor of corruption in cultural, political, sexual, and biological critiques of civilization and society are also subjects that the Committee of the Davis Center would very much like to see treated. The theme of corruption, we hope, will appeal to scholars interested in Antiquity, the Middle Ages, and the modern world whether they are doing research on Africa, the Americas, Asia, or Europe.

The Center will offer a limited number of research fellowships for one or two semesters, running from September to January and from February to June, designed for highly recommended younger scholars who have finished their dissertations as well as for senior scholars with established reputations. Fellows are expected to live in Princeton in order to take an active part in the intellectual interchange with other members of the Seminar. Funds are limited, and candidates are, therefore, strongly urged to apply to other grant-giving institutions as well as the Center, if they wish to come for a full year.

Inquiries and requests for fellowship application forms should be addressed to the Manager, Shelby Cullom Davis Center for Historical Studies, Department of History, G-13 Dickinson Hall, Princeton University, Princeton, NJ 08544-1017, U.S.A. The deadline for applications and letters of recommendation for fellowships for 1998-99 is December 1, 1997. Scholars who would like to offer a paper to one of the weekly Seminars are asked to send a brief description of their proposal and a current curriculum vitae to the Director.

Studies in American Political Development

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Editors

Karen Orren, University of California, Los Angeles
Stephen Skowronek, Yale University

Studies in American Political Development publishes high quality scholarship covering American political change and institutional development from a historical perspective. Articles focus on government institutions and their social, economic and cultural environment. The journal features in-depth original articles, which allow scholars to elaborate on the complex patterns of state-society relations. These longer articles also encourage an interdisciplinary approach—tying in relevant issues and related themes. In addition, SAPD recognizes the importance of comparative politics to the study of American institutions.

ECONOMICS IN THE LONG RUN

New Deal Theorists and Their Legacies, 1933–1993

THEODORE ROSENOF

“At last, a concise, thorough, and lucid overview of the economic thought that has been driving American governmental policy since the Great Depression. . . . Challenges us to realize that the central issues of the 1930s are still central, as is the possibility that a creative synthesis of ideas from the Age of Roosevelt might finally resolve them.”—Alan Lawson, Boston College

A History of Corporate Finance

Jonathan Baskin and Paul J. Miranti, Jr.

This study focuses on the role of institutions and organizations in the development of corporate finance from the Italian merchant banks of the Renaissance through the formation of conglomerates and leveraged-buy-out partnerships in contemporary Wall Street. It also puts forth a compelling argument for the closer integration of historical and quantitative research methodologies in financial theory. The epilogue contains an original algorithm that explains the relationship between the short-term, firm-specific factors and longer-term environmental elements that have shaped the historical development of finance.

Central and Eastern Europe 1944-1993

Detour from the Periphery to the Periphery

Ivan T. Berend

Ivan Berend uses a vast range of sources, as well as his own personal experience, to analyze the fortunes of the postwar socialist regimes in Eastern Europe. His comparative approach stretches beyond the confines of economic history to produce a work of political economy, encompassing the cultural and personal forces that have influenced the development of the "Eastern Bloc" countries over the past fifty years. The book is distinguished by its unique combination of time, region and topic, and is a major contribution to the economic history of the twentieth century.

Progress and Problems in Medieval England

Essays in Honour of Edward Miller

Richard Britnell and John Hatcher, Editors

In this series of essays on the society and economy of England between the eleventh and the sixteenth centuries, fourteen contributors address many of the most important themes in an era which experienced profound change in rural, commercial, urban and industrial life. Subjects covered include the growth of London, the commercial and urban development of the north, Italian merchants and banking, overseas trade, taxation, farm servants, hunting and poaching, changing relations between landlords and tenants, the expansion of the economy in the twelfth century and the great slump of the fifteenth.

Contours of Death and Disease in Early Modern England

Mary J. Dobson

This book provides a penetrating account of death and disease in early modern England. Using a wide range of sources for the southeast of England, the author highlights the tremendous variation in levels of mortality across geographical contours and across two centuries of time. She explores the epidemiological causes and consequences of these mortality variations, and offers the reader a fascinating insight into the way patients and practitioners perceived, understood and reacted to the multitude of fevers, poxes and plagues in past times.

Accounting for War

Soviet Production, Employment, and the Defence Burden, 1940-1945

Mark Harrison

How did the Soviet Union compare economically with its allies and adversaries before and during World War II? Was Soviet economic survival under massive German attack to be expected? What was the cost of the war in rubles, lives and foregone postwar economic well-being? In this book Mark Harrison answers these questions, providing a comprehensive analysis of the hitherto secret Soviet statistical record.

European Proto-Industrialization

Sheilagh C. Ogilvie and Markus Cerman, Editors

Since the 1970s some historians have argued that proto-industrialization broke down traditional society and prepared the way for the industrial revolution. These studies provide an essential guide to an important, yet often confusing field of economic and social history.

Odd Markets in Japanese History

Law and Economic Growth

J. Mark Ramseyer

Employing a rational-choice approach, Professor Ramseyer studies the impact of Japanese law on economic growth in Japan. Toward that end, the author investigates the way law governed various markets, and the way that people negotiated contracts within those markets. Findings reveal that the legal system generally promoted mutually advantageous deals, and that people generally negotiated in ways that shrewdly promoted their private best interests. Whether in the markets for indentured servants, prostitutes, or marriage partners, this study reports little evidence of either age- or gender- related exploitation.

Insider Lending

Banks, Personal Connections, and Economic Development in Industrial New England

Naomi Lamoreaux

"...in this creative and well-crafted book, Naomi R. Lamoreaux shows that insider lending actually worked well...Insider Lending explores an important aspect of banking history that has been largely neglected. Not only will it be cited repeatedly, but it will generate further studies of insider lending in other times and places, and by other financial intermediaries. This book, I predict, will become a classic."

—Journal of American History

Insider lending was an integral aspect of the banking system in early nineteenth century New England. Not only was the practice an accepted fact of economic life, but as this text argues, it enabled banks to play an important role in financing economic development.

Metropolis and Hinterland

The City of Rome and the Italian Economy, 200 BC-AD 200

Neville Morley

This book studies the growth of the city of Rome and the effects of the city's demands for food and migrants on the economy of Italy. It seeks to question the idea that all great cities, especially in the ancient world, were parasites on the societies that supported them. On the contrary, the growth of Rome promoted development in agriculture, marketing systems and urbanization in Italy. The book reappraises not only the traditional view of Rome as a consumer city but also the history of Italy in the late Republic and early Principate.

The Culture of the Market

Historical Essays

Thomas L. Haskell and

Richard F. Teichgraber III, Editors

"The Culture of the Market is an imaginative, wide-ranging, and lucid exploration of its theme. At a time when a simplistic rhetoric of the market is commonplace, these essays, with their historical concreteness, multi-faceted perspectives, and nuanced understanding of the embeddedness and implications of the market, are both timely and powerful. The contributions are outstanding scholars; the cumulative effect of their work is profound. The whole is a tribute to the value of issue-focused interdisciplinary scholarship."
