Aleksandr Diachenko is a Researcher at the Institute of Archaeology of the National Academy of Sciences of Ukraine. His research interests include archaeological theory and methodology, spatial archaeology, mathematical simulations, archaeodemography, the Eneolithic period in south-eastern Europe and the Cucuteni–Trypillia cultural complex.

Aleksander Dzybiński was born in 1972 in Warsaw, and has studied at the Institute of Archaeology in Warsaw, the Institute for Prehistory and Archaeological Science (IPAS) in Basel, the Institute for Prehistory and Early History in Freiburg, the Institute for Ethnology in Basel and the Institute for Ancient History in Basel. He received his doctoral degree (Dr. Phil.) at the University of Basel with his dissertation ‘Metrologische Strukturen in der Kultur mit Schnurkeramik und ihre Bedeutung für die Kulturentwicklung des mitteleuropäischen Raumes’. His other publications include Ritual and understanding. Rational bases of communication and exchange in prehistoric Europe (2008) and Power of the line. Metaphor, number, and material culture in European prehistory (2013).

Matt Edgeworth is Honorary Visiting Research Fellow at the University of Leicester. Having obtained his Ph.D. at the University of Durham in 1992, he works mainly in commercial archaeology, with special interests in urban stratigraphy and the archaeology of rivers. For the month of November 2015 he was Field Archaeologist in Residence at the McDonald Institute of Archaeological Research at the University of Cambridge. He is author of Ethnographies of archaeological practices (2006) and Fluid pasts. Archaeology of flow (2011).

Tim Flohr Sørensen is an Assistant Professor at the Saxo Institute, University of Copenhagen. He is an archaeologist, and has primarily published on topics associated with death and decay, movement, affect, cemeteries and architecture in prehistoric and contemporary Denmark. He received his Ph.D. degree from Aarhus University in 2010, and held a postdoctoral position at the University of Cambridge in 2010–12. He was an assistant professor at Aarhus University in 2012–14 before moving to the University of Copenhagen.

Anders Högberg is Associate Professor of Archaeology at Linnaeus University, Kalmar, Sweden. Previously he worked for several years as an archaeologist within the heritage sector. He has published extensively on public archaeology, plurality and different aspects of heritage studies. He also has a keen interest in prehistoric lithic technology. Currently he is involved in a project about human cognitive evolution. He is also affiliated with the Heritage Futures project (based at UCL). Together with colleagues at Linnaeus University, Högberg has set up the first graduate school in contract archaeology in Sweden. He is co-editor of the journal Current Swedish archaeology.

Cătălin Nicolae Popa is a Postdoctoral Fellow in the Topoi Excellence Cluster, Freie Universität Berlin, after receiving his Ph.D. in archaeology from the University of Cambridge in 2014. He is the co-editor of Fingerprinting the Iron Age (2014) and Archaeology and the (de)construction of national and supra-national polities (2012). His research addresses topics such as prehistoric group identity, the relation between archaeology and nationalism, environment perception, and the Iron Age of Europe. He has a particularly strong focus on the role of archaeology and the Iron Age past in the creation of Romanian national identity, having published several studies on the topic.

Christopher Prescott is a Professor of Archaeology at the University of Oslo, Norway. He has participated in field projects in Scandinavia and Italy, and his research interests include the Nordic Neolithic and Bronze Age, agro-pastoral practices in prehistory, identity, migrations and cultural transformations. This has led to an interest in the impact of globalization, migration and new immigrant minorities on the contemporary sociology, politics and narratives of cultural heritage and archaeology. He has also written about the looting and trade in archaeological materials.

Jeff Sanders is the Dig It! Project Manager and a passionate advocate for archaeology with considerable experience of working across (and beyond) the heritage sector on collaborative projects. After completing his doctorate at Edinburgh University in interpretations of prehistoric landscapes around Europe he project-managed ScARF from 2008 to 2013 at the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland. He now manages Dig It! for the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland, in partnership with Archaeology Scotland, meaning that you are now as likely to find him in a world of games and stories as getting his hands dirty on a dig.

Nathan Schlanger's research and teaching interests include technology and material-culture studies, the history and politics of archaeology from the 19th century onwards in Europe and Africa, and comparative heritage management in a global perspective. Recent relevant contributions include Archaeology and the global economic crisis (2010, with K. Aitchison), European archaeology abroad. Global settings, comparative perspectives (2013, with S.v.d. Linde et al.) and Les intraduisibles du patrimoine en Afrique subsaharienne (2014, with D. Wozny, B. Cassin et al.). Following his Cambridge Ph.D., he has worked at the Institut national d'histoire de l'art, the Ecole du Louvre and the Institut national de recherches archéologiques préventives (INRAP), where he was Head of International Relations. He is now Professor of Archaeology at the Ecole nationale des chartes in Paris, and a member of the UMR Trajectoires.

Ancient Mesoamerica

Editors

William R. Fowler, Vanderbilt University, USA

Kenneth G. Hirth, Pennsylvania State University, USA

Ancient Mesoamerica is the international forum for the method, theory, substance and interpretation of Mesoamerican archaeology, art history and ethnohistory. The journal publishes papers chiefly concerned with the Pre-Columbian archaeology of the Mesoamerican region, but also features articles from other disciplines including ethnohistory, historical archaeology and ethnoarchaeology. Topics covered include the origins of agriculture, the economic base of city states and empires, political organisation from the Formative through the Early Colonial periods, the development and function of early writing, and the use of iconography to reconstruct ancient religious beliefs and practices.

International Journal of Cultural Property

Published for the International Cultural Property Society

Editor

Alexander A. Bauer, Queens College, CUNY, USA

International Journal of Cultural Property provides a vital, international, and multidisciplinary forum for the broad spectrum of views surrounding cultural property, cultural heritage, and related issues. Its mission is to develop new ways of dealing with cultural property debates, to be a venue for the proposal or enumeration of pragmatic policy suggestions, and to be accessible to a wide audience of professionals, academics, and lay readers. This peer-reviewed journal publishes original research papers, case notes, documents of record, chronicles, conference reports, and book reviews. Contributions come from the wide variety of fields implicated in the debates -- law, anthropology, public policy, archaeology, art history, preservation, ethics, economics, museum-, tourism-, and heritage studies -- and from a variety of perspectives and interests -- indigenous, Western, and non-Western; academic, professional and amateur; consumers and producers -- to promote meaningful discussion of the complexities, competing values, and other concerns that form the environment within which these disputes exist.

The Classical Quarterly

Published for The Classical Association

Editors

Bruce Gibson, University of Liverpool, UK

Andrew Morrison, University of Manchester, UK

The Classical Quarterly has a reputation for publishing the highest quality classical scholarship for over 100 years. It publishes research papers and short notes in the fields of language, literature, history and philosophy. Two substantial issues (around 300 pages each) of The Classical Quarterly appear each year, in May and December. Given the quality and depth of the articles published in The Classical Quarterly, any serious classical library needs to have a copy on its shelves.

Guidelines for contributors

Archaeological dialogues is a broad, peer-reviewed journal for debating archaeology. Articles should be accessible to an audience which may be unfamiliar with the specific period and region discussed. Transparent writing is encouraged above abstruse reasoning. Jargon should be avoided and succinct writing is appreciated. We value good illustrations. These can include photographs, line-drawings and maps.

Procedure

The Archaeological dialogues publishing process includes the following steps: submission, evaluation, decision (acceptance, modification or rejection), copy-editing, proof-reading, publication, and distribution. In order to guarantee efficient and quality publication contributors are requested to adhere closely to the following guidelines:

- All manuscripts should be written in English. Manuscripts that seriously fail to conform to the guidelines will be returned to authors for revision before they will be considered.
- When submitting a contribution to Archaeological dialogues, it will be acknowledged on receipt. One of the editors will be the contact person for a paper throughout the entire process. If scope, quality and language are appropriate it will be sent to two anonymous referees for expert opinion. Usually within two or three months, the editors will inform you of their final decision. In the case of rejection, an editorial justification will be provided, including the original referees' reports. In the case of acceptance – which may be conditional on revisions – one of the editors will guide you through the rest of the publishing process. Before an article goes into print, authors will receive a copy of the proofs to check. The entire procedure between submission and appearance should take less than a year.

Types of contributions

Archaeological dialogues publishes two main types of article: 'discussion articles' and 'articles.' The former are accompanied by published comments and a reply. Discussion articles are usually longer, up to 8–9000 words, whereas articles are typically around 4–7000 words. Discussion papers usually take longer to appear in print because of the time required for comments and reply. In addition, the journal publishes 'provocations' and 'reactions'. These are short pieces normally less than 2000 words which take a novel or provocative stance on a particular topic, likely to initiate a lively dialogue, or which respond to an article previously published in Archaeological dialogues. Provocations and Reactions can be more essay-like in style. They are not subject to full peer review but are reviewed by the editorial board. Review essays and interviews are usually solicited by the editorial board, but scholars with suggestions in this direction are encouraged to contact us.

Submission of contributions

Manuscripts are preferably received by email (dialogues@cambridge.org). Alternatively, a CD and hardcopy may be sent to: Archaeological Dialogues, c/o Jeremia Pelgrom, Koninklijk Nederlands Instituut Rome, Via Omero 10/12, 00197 ROMA, ITALY.

Authors are solely responsible not only for the contents of their manuscripts, but also for securing any legal rights or permissions to publish submitted material, including copyright-protected materials. The appropriate acknowledgements should be given in captions, endnotes, or elsewhere. Manuscripts should not be submitted to (nor should they have been published in) any other journal or publication.

See <http://uk.cambridge.org/journals/ard> for an extended version of the guidelines for contributors.

This journal issue has been printed on FSC-certified paper and cover board. FSC is an independent, non-governmental, not-for-profit organization established to promote the responsible management of the world's forests. Please see www.fsc.org for information.

Archaeological Dialogues is indexed in the Thomson Reuters Arts and Humanities Citation Index.
