

Columbus, Cortés, and Other Essays

Ramón Iglesia

Translated by Lesley Byrd Simpson

In his essays, Ramón Iglesia (1905–1948) makes a radical break with nineteenth-century historians by presenting the personalities and motives of eminent men. Columbus, Bernal Díaz del Castillo, Carlos de Sigüenza y Góngora, Cortés, Peter Martyr, Gonzalo Fernández de Oviedo, and Ferdinand Columbus are examined through the evidence supplied by their own writings. The sharpness of these portraits is due to the wit and learning of the author, his lucid style, and his intelligent selection of material.

1969 LC: 69–13727 256 pages $7.95

The Colonial Background of Modern Brazil

Caio Prado, Jr.

Translated by Suzette Macedo

"This book, rich in facts and in interpretation, deserves a prominent place on the library shelf of all Latin Americanists."

—Hispanic American Historical Review 1969 530 pages paper, $3.45

Winner of the 1968 Herbert E. Bolton Memorial Prize

The Mexican Revolution

Federal Expenditure and Social Change Since 1910

James W. Wilkie

With a Foreword by Howard F. Cline

Many investigators have theorized about the nature of upheaval in society, but Professor Wilkie here has chosen to analyze political action and social change pragmatically. In testing concepts about the Mexican experience since 1910, he offers new data and an original interpretation of the first major revolution of this century. Dr. Wilkie quantifies ideology through an examination of Mexican yearly projected and actual budgetary accounts, and he presents an Index of Poverty which measures the outcome of political action in several epochs of "institutionalized revolution."

1967 LC: 67-14442 337 pages tables graphs maps $7.50

from California

University of California Press • Berkeley 94720