He received his Ph.D. from the University of Chicago in 1922. He taught at Howard and American Universities in Washington, D.C. and worked for various government agencies in Washington. He served on the Council of the Association 1941-43. He was the recipient of the Association's Charles E. Merriam Award in 1981.

Organized Sections Welcome Members

Kay Sterling
American Political Science Association

Following are brief descriptions of the foci or purposes of each of APSA's Organized

Sections. In most cases, the language used is taken directly from the original petition submitted to the Council for recognition of status as an Organized Section.

Section officers are elected during the sections' business meetings at APSA's Annual Meeting, and are listed, each year, in the fall issue of PS: Political Science & Politics. (The most recent listing is the fall 1987 issue, p. 1025.) Many sections publish newsletters for their members; some offer awards for scholarly achievement. All are allotted panels during the Annual Meeting. For information about activities of any section, please call or write the appropriate person as indicated in the fall listing.

1. Federalism and Intergovernmental Relations: The purpose of the section is to plan, develop and implement professional activities for Association members with interests in subjects of federalism and intergovernmental relations.

2. Law, Courts and Judicial Process: The purpose of the section is to promote interest in teaching and research in the areas of law and the judicial process. The section also seeks to encourage communication between persons interested in law and the judicial process within the Association and with related disciplines.

3. Legislative Studies: The Legislative Studies Section invites members with an interest in legislative processes, behavior and representation. The section may establish special panels, workshops, symposia, or social gatherings at the APSA Annual Meeting or at such other times as may be appropriate. Members receive a newsletter. The section is closely associated with the Legislative Studies Quarterly and encourages its members to subscribe.

4. Policy Studies: The purposes of the section are to help promote the application of political science to important policy problems; aid in developing panels, workshops and roundtables for the APSA Annual Meeting and related programs for the regional political science association conventions; provide a general meeting at the APSA Annual Meeting for the discussion of issues relevant to the policy studies field; and provide ways of networking political scientists and others who are interested in policy studies, but are not necessarily members of the Policy Studies Section.
