The Infection of Thomas De Quincey

A Psychopathology of Imperialism

John Barrell

The Victorian writer Thomas De Quincey was a journalist and propagandist of racial paranoia who harbored and expressed the most ferocious and brutal denunciation of Orientals. This remarkable book is an account of De Quincey's fears of all things oriental; it is also an extraordinary analysis of the psychopathology of mid-Victorian imperialist culture.

“A deeply engaging piece of writing and scholarship. I couldn't put it down.”—Roy Porter $30.00

Wharram Percy

Deserted Medieval Village

Maurice Beresford and John Hurst

Richard III

A Study of Service
Rosemary Horrox

"... the best study of Richard III for a generation." —The Times Literary Supplement

"This well-produced study is an important contribution to Ricardian scholarship... the author uses what is at her disposal with great confidence to present a convincing picture of how power could be acquired, how it was used, and how, ironically, it failed to save Richard."

The Medieval Castle in England and Wales

A Political and Social History
N. J. G. Pounds

Few studies of the medieval castle have even mentioned the role of the castle in the social and economic history of England. This book deals exclusively with these aspects of the castle's history, in particular with the attempts of the crown to control and limit castle building and with the role of the castle in the administration of the country.

Inquiry into the Picturesque

Sidney K. Robinson

The aesthetic mode of the picturesque has undergone so many transformations since its initial discussion in eighteenth-century England that it is hard to say just what it is. In these probing essays, Robinson broadens our conception of the Picturesque, acquainting us with the direct crossover between eighteenth-century painting, landscape, poetry, and politics
