GUIDELINES FOR AUTHORS

Contributions to Children Australia from those interested in the wellbeing of children, young people and their families are encouraged. The preferred length of paper submitted is 3500-4000 words. Longer papers on topics of particular significance may be accepted in consultation with the editors.

Manuscripts may be accepted for publication, returned for revision or rejected. However, every effort will be made to help authors bring their manuscript up to the required standard for publication. Minor amendments may be made by editorial staff following review to ensure that reasonable standards of content, presentation and readability are maintained. The editors’ decision is final. In addition to the above, Children Australia welcomes brief reports (500-1500 words) on program development, policy development or research. Acceptance for publication will be on the basis of review by the editorial team.

COPYRIGHT: It is a condition of publication that copyright is assigned by the author(s) to the publisher. Copyright assignment forms will be sent to authors on receipt of their papers.

GENERAL STYLE GUIDELINES

1. Contributions should follow the format and style described in the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (6th ed). Spellling and punctuation should conform to The Macquarie Dictionary (4th ed.). For matters of style not covered in these two publications, the Style Manual for authors, editors, and printers (6th ed) should be consulted.

2. Uncommon abbreviations and acronyms should be explained. Do not use underlying except to indicate italics. Full stops should not be used in abbreviations or acronyms (e.g., N500).

3. Use single quotation marks to introduce a word or phrase used as an ironic comment, as slang, or which was coined by a specific person. Use quotation marks when the first time the word or phrase is used; do not use them again. Do not use quotation marks to introduce a technical or key term. Instead, italicise the term.

4. Do not use any footnotes. Endnotes should be kept to a minimum and listed at the end of the text under the centred heading ‘Endnotes’. Acknowledgements should be placed at the end of the article with a separate heading.

5. A list of figure captions should follow the tables in the manuscript.

Copyright in all articles rests with authors. However, a limited set of permanent copyright permission licences has been granted by authors to the publisher to allow publication in this journal. Rights in the reproduction and distribution of the published articles as visual facsimiles of this published edition by either mechanical or digital means is controlled by the publisher and any distributions by CAL for copying of an author’s work therefore are due to the publisher. All other rights in the words contained in this edition are controlled by the authors. Authors are therefore free to adapt and/or republish the words making up their own articles either online or in print, including academic repositories.
Children Australia is a refereed journal with the majority of papers being peer reviewed to assess their suitability for publication. Peer-reviewed papers are expected to meet contemporary academic standards. However, at the discretion of the editor, papers which have not been reviewed are published from time to time. Such papers may include short commentaries on practice issues that are essentially based on observation and experience; reports on program approaches, initiatives or projects that are both short and unreferenced; historical overviews; or short papers that respond to a peer-reviewed article published in an earlier edition which adds to informed debate or provides an alternative perspective. It is anticipated that no more than one such paper would be included in each issue.

In order to clarify which articles have been reviewed and which have not, we now include a symbol at the end of each article as follows: ■ = peer-reviewed article; □ = non-reviewed article
