

APSA Publishes Monograph on Political Science Journals

APSA has published a new monograph on the scholarly journals in which political scientists usually publish and on the specific review procedures and style requirements followed by these journals.

This guide, Political Science Journal Information, compiled by Fenton Martin and Robert Goehlert, both librarians at Indiana University, is designed to simplify the difficult questions facing scholars of how best to report their research and what is the appropriate forum for their work.

The book covers 52 journals and provides information on publishing details such as type of articles accepted, number of manuscripts required for submission, style requirements, number of manuscripts submitted and accepted each year and publication lag time.

In addition to the detailed information on selected journals, Martin and Goehlert provide in the appendix a more complete list of political science journals along with a bibliography on social science publishing and a series of suggestions for evaluating journals and preparing manuscripts for submission.

Political Science Journal Information may be obtained by sending $6 (APSA members) or $12 (non-members) to Book Department, APSA, 1527 New Hampshire Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

News from the Congressional Fellowship Program

West German Scholars Join Congressional Fellowship Program

Two West German scholars, Eberhard Barg and Bernd Kubbig, have been awarded Congressional Fellowships for part of the 1982-83 program year. Under a grant from the German Marshall Fund, APSA selected Barg, an advanced graduate student of political science at the Free University of Berlin, and Kubbig, who recently received his Ph.D. from the University of Frankfurt, to participate in the orientation program and to take a legislative assignment on Capitol Hill for four and a half months. Kubbig is working on nuclear issues for Edward Markey, Democrat of Massachusetts, and Barg has chosen to serve in the office of Mervyn Dymally, Democrat of California. The two Fellows will return to West Germany in mid-April.

Helga Haftendorn of the Berlin Free University handled the selection process in West Germany and was assisted by Ernst-Otto Czempel of Johann Wolfgang Goethe University.

In addition to their superior scholarly records, both Barg and Kubbig have been active politically in West Germany. Barg is a member of the Social Democratic Party on the local level while Kubbig informally follows the activities of the new party of the Greens, an environmental and peace movement in the Federal Republic. Kubbig wrote his dissertation on U.S. nuclear non-proliferation policy.

While the West German component of the Congressional Fellowship Program is only funded for one year, APSA, with the assistance of political scientist Stephen F. Szabo, who helped arrange the first year of West German participation in the Congressional Fellowship Program, is seeking support for future years.

Carl Albert Fellows

the Carl Albert Fellowship which is awarded to Carl Albert Fellows at the University of Oklahoma. These Fellows are selected in national competition to enter a specialized Ph.D. program on Congress. After Carl Albert Fellows have completed their coursework at a high level of competence and passed their comprehensive examinations, the Fellows are eligible to participate in the Congressional Fellowship Program. Frank J. Smist, Jr. is the first Carl Albert Fellow to be a Congressional Fellow. Smist is serving in the office of Gillis Long, Democrat of Louisiana, and he is writing his dissertation on the intelligence committees in Congress.

Advisory Committee

In addition to the West German and Carl Albert Fellows, the Congressional Fellowship Program is composed of Federal Fellows (including domestic and foreign affairs fellows), Robert Wood Johnson Health Policy Fellows, Asia Foundation Fellows, an American Anthropological Association Fellow, and APSA Political Science and Journalism Fellows. To support fellows in political science and journalism, APSA relies on contributions from corporations and foundations.

Foreign Affairs Fellows for 1982-83 with seminar director Fred Holborn who teaches a two-month seminar for the Foreign Affairs Fellows. (Sitting, left to right): Robert Becker, State Department; Stephen Gallogly, State Department; Lynn Holec, Commerce Department; Roger Dankert, State Department; Helen Grayson, Commerce Department. (Standing, left to right): William Shepard, State Department, Steven Meyer, Central Intelligence Agency; John Harrod, United States Information Agency; William Wight, Department of the Army; Carl Leininger, Department of the Army; Patrick Maher, Central Intelligence Agency; Fred Holborn, Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies; and William Millan, State Department.

W. Polsby of the University of California at Berkeley, decided last year to increase substantially the stipends of APSA Political Science and Journalism Fellows, to widen publicity of the program in order to increase the number of political scientists and journalists in the program, and to seek additional sources of support from corporations and foundations.

The Advisory Committee has succeeded on every point. Stipends were increased in two steps to $14,000 in the current year and $16,000 for the upcoming 1983-84 fellowship year from $12,000 in the 1981-82 year.

Publicity on the 1983-84 program included advertisements in the Columbia Journalism Review, the Washington Monthly and PS. Also, fliers on the program were sent to every graduate department of political science in the country, every U.S. daily newspaper with a circulation of 50,000 or more and to special populations. Also, the program was featured in Quill, a national magazine for journalists. Presumably as a result of these efforts, applications doubled for 1983-84 compared to the previous year.

The number of political scientists and journalists in the Congressional Fellowship Program was also increased to a total of eight APSA-funded Fellows (four political scientists and four journalists) in 1983-84 from six (three each) in the current 1982-83 program year. In addition, participation of Carl Albert Fellows, West German Fellows and certain Federal Fellows increases the number of political scientists in the program.

Funding

A major goal of the Advisory Committee has been to increase financial support for the program. The committee established two fundraising committees for corporate support and giving by journalism foundations, led respectively by Charls E. Walker, president of Charls E. Walker Associates, Inc., and David Broder of the Washington Post. Other members of these two fundraising committees are Albert Hunt of the Wall Street Journal and Wayne Kelley of Congressional Quarterly, Inc. for fundraising in the journalism community and political scientist Eugene Eidenberg and U.S. Representatives Thomas S. Foley and Richard B. Cheney for general fundraising.

A number of corporations and foundations now provide vital support for the Congressional Fellowship Program. These include:

- Andreas Foundation
- AT&T
- Exxon Education Foundation
- Field Enterprises Charitable Corporation
- Gannett Foundation
- IBM
- Poynter Fund

Program Activities

The program activities of the Congressional Fellowship Program include a month-long orientation program in the month of November during which time Fellows negotiate for positions on Capitol Hill. Fellows then serve in a legislative capacity for four and one-half months each in the House and the Senate. During the Congressional Fellowship year Fellows participate in weekly seminars led by guest speakers, and Fellows participate in an exchange program with Canadian Parliamentary Interns who visit Washington, D.C. for a week and who then host 20 Congressional Fellows in Ottawa for a week. The Canadian exchange is funded by the U.S. Information Agency and the Canadian government.

Alumni Association

The program also has an Alumni Association which organizes meetings in Washington and at the Annual Meeting. The Alumni Association is completing production of the Congressional Fellows Directory, containing names, addresses and current positions of all present and former fellows. Former Congressional Fellows interested in being added to the mailing list for future Alumni Association meetings or for the directory should contact: Fred Clarke, Benjamin/Clarke Associates, 10605 Concord Street, Suite 501, Kensington, Maryland 20895, (301) 949-1414.

Funds Available to Participate in Workshops on Women and Politics

APSA is making funds available to political scientists selected to participate in workshops at regional meetings to introduce faculty to new instructional units on women and American politics.

The units are designed to incorporate scholarship on women and politics into existing courses in the field of American government and politics, particularly the introductory course.

The units are being developed for a project sponsored by the Committee on the Status of Women in the Profession and the Committee on Education of the American Political Science Association. The project is supported by a grant from the Fund for the Improvement of Post Secondary Education.

Applications to the workshop are invited from faculty interested in learning and adapting student materials that will enhance and extend the coverage given to women's participation, achievements, and public policy issues in American politics. Each unit can be used to augment the core course textbooks.

Workshops will be conducted by the authors of the instructional units.

Workshops are scheduled in conjunction with the spring 1983 regional political science association meetings, according to the following schedule:

March 17: Southwestern Political Science Association, Shamrock Hilton, Houston.

Women's Movements. Director: Joyce Gelb, The City College of the City University of New York.

Organizations and Institutions. Director: Milda Hedblom, Augsburg College.

March 23: Western Political Science Association, Seattle Sheraton, Seattle.

Judicial Process and Behavior. Director: Beverly Cook, The University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

Family and Public Policy. Director: Irene Diamond, University of California, Los Angeles.

April 19: Midwest Political Science Association, American Congress, Chicago.

Participation and Political Action. Director: Virginia Sapiro, University of Wisconsin at Madison.

Coercion and Violence. Director: Judith Stiehm, University of Southern California.

Women's Movements. Director: Ethel Klein, Harvard University.

Each political science teacher selected to participate in a workshop will receive up to $100 toward travel expenses and $50 stipend for expenses to attend the workshop.

Faculty participants will be asked to field test at least one unit in at least one class in 1983-84.

How to Apply

Faculty who wish to participate in a workshop should call: Sheila Mann, Director, Educational Affairs, American Political Science Association, (202) 483-2512.

Authors and Topics of Units for the Project "Citizenship and Change: Women and American Politics"

Diane L. Fowlkes, Georgia State University: An essay introducing the intellectual and instructional objectives of the project.

Irene Diamond, Purdue University: Family and Public Policy.
