Recent modules

Problem psychiatrists: Part 1 – introduction to dealing with poor performance

The GMC makes it clear that all doctors are expected to understand and deal with poor performance by their colleagues. Serious issues are relatively uncommon, perhaps only one or two cases a year in most average-sized mental health trusts or health boards. Developing and employing the necessary skills is therefore not particularly easy. This module introduces what doctors need to know about how to approach such problems. CPD Credits: 1

Complementary medicines for ASD and ADHD

Complementary alternative medicines (CAMs) are commonly used for attention-deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) and autism spectrum disorders (ASD), and interventions vary greatly in complexity, effectiveness and risks. The goal of this module is to equip psychiatrists to deal confidently and sensitively with the clinical queries of parents and carers about CAMs-based interventions. The module concerns CAMs for children, but some of the information is also applicable to adults. CPD Credits: 1.5

Podcast Learning in psychiatry using films

Dr Joyce Almeida, author of the 'Minds on Film' blog featured on the Royal College of Psychiatrists' website, discusses with Dr Ali Ajaz the use of film for teaching and learning psychiatry, giving examples of films that have explored mental health issues and conditions. CPD Credits: 0.5

Podcast Attention deficit-hyperactivity disorder in children and adolescents

Professor Heidi Feldman, from Stanford University School of Medicine, talks with Dr Raj Persaud about ADHD in children and adolescents, referring to her recent clinical review of the disorder in the New England Journal of Medicine. CPD Credits: 0.5
