Jörg Baberowski has been Professor for East European History at Humboldt University, Berlin, since 2002. He received his doctorate from the University of Frankfurt am Main and his habilitation at the University of Tübingen. His publications include: Autokratie und Justiz: Zum Verhältnis von Rechtsstaatlichkeit und Rückständigkeit im ausgehenden Zarenreich 1864–1914 (Klostermann, 1996); Der Feind ist überall: Stalinismus im Kaukasus (DVA, 2003); Der Rote Terror: Die Geschichte des Stalinismus (DVA, 2004).

Casimir Dadak is Professor of Finance and Economics at Hollins University, Virginia, USA. His primary research interests include the economic and political transformation of the former Soviet bloc and the political economy of European economic integration. He is currently writing a book on the economic development of Poland from 1850 until the present. He has published in English and Polish in, among others, Cato Journal, The Wall Street Journal, The Independent Review, Międzynarodowy Przegląd Polityczny, and Arcana.

Dan Diner is Professor of Modern History at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem and Director of the Simon-Dubnow-Institute for Jewish History and Culture at Leipzig University. His publications include: Zeitenschwelle: Gegenwartsfragen an die Geschichte (Pantheon, 2010), Cataclysms: A History of the Twentieth Century from Europe’s Edge (University of Wisconsin Press, 2008), Beyond the Conceivable: Studies on Germany, Nazism and the Holocaust (University of California Press, 2000).

Grégory Dufaud holds a PhD in History from and is an associate member of the Centre de Recherche en Histoire des Slaves (CRHS) at the University of Paris I Panthéon-Sorbonne. He is currently working as a secondary school teacher. He is the author of the book: Les Tatars de Crimée et la politique soviétique des nationalités (Non Lieu, 2011). He was joint editor with Aurélie Campana and Sophie Tournon of Les Déportations en héritage: Les peuples réprimés du Caucase et de Crimée, hier et aujourd’hui (Presses Universitaires de Rennes, 2010). Following on from his work on the politics of nationality in the USSR, he is now researching Soviet psychiatric institutions between the two world wars.
Thomas Kühne is the Strassler Professor of Holocaust History at Clark University, Massachusetts. Trained in Germany, he received his PhD at the University of Tübingen and his habilitation at the University of Bielefeld. Since moving to the U.S., he has been a fellow of the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation and of the Institute for Advanced Studies in Princeton. His first book on electoral culture and suffrage reform in pre-1914 Prussia (1994) was awarded the German Bundestag Research Prize in Parliamentarism. His volume on men’s history (1996) has established the field in Central Europe. Kühne’s more recent research revolves around cultures of mass violence in twentieth-century Europe. His 2006 book Kameradschaft inquires into male bonding and comradeship among ordinary German soldiers before, during, and after the Holocaust. Belonging and Genocide: Hitler’s Community, 1918–1945 (Yale University Press, 2010) reveals how the longing for community, the practice of togetherness, and the ethos of comradeship became the basis of mass murder – how an advanced civilian society became a genocidal society. Kühne has also been the recipient of major grants by the German Research Council and the Volkswagen Foundation.

Mikołaj Kunicki is Assistant Professor of History at the University of Notre Dame, Indiana, USA. He received his PhD in history from Stanford University in 2004. He is the author of Between the Brown and the Red: Nationalism, Catholicism and Communism in Twentieth Century Poland (Ohio University Press, forthcoming 2012). He has published in European Review of History, East European Politics and Societies, and Transit–Europäische Revue.

Mark Mazower is Ira D. Wallach Professor of History at Columbia University, New York City, and directs the Heyman Center for the Humanities. His books include Inside Hitler’s Greece: The Experience of Occupation, 1941–44 (Yale University Press, 1993), Dark Continent: Europe’s Twentieth Century (Allen Lane, 1998), Salonica, City of Ghosts: Christians, Muslims and Jews, 1430–1950 (HarperCollins, 2004) and Hitler’s Empire: Nazi Rule in Occupied Europe (Allen Lane, 2008). His new book will be about the rise and fall of international government as idea and reality.

Christopher Moores is a teaching fellow in the School of History and Cultures at the University of Birmingham. He completed his PhD on British Civil Liberties Activism, 1934–1989, in 2011. He has also published ‘The Progressive Professionals: The National Council for Civil Liberties and the Politics of Activism in the 1960s’, Twentieth Century British History, 20, 4 (2009), 538–60.

António Costa Pinto is Research Professor at the Institute of Social Sciences, University of Lisbon. His research interests include Fascism and authoritarianism, political elites, democratization and transitional justice in new democracies, the European Union, and the comparative study of political change in Europe. His recent publications include Ruling Elites and Decision-Making in Fascist-Id Dictatorships (Columbia University Press, 2009); Rethinking the Nature of Fascism (Palgrave

Central European History offers articles, review essays, and book reviews that range widely through the history of Germany, Austria, and other German-speaking regions of Central Europe from the medieval era to the present. All topics and approaches to history are welcome, whether cultural, social, political, diplomatic, intellectual, economic, and military history, as well as historiography and methodology. Contributions that treat new fields, such as post-1945 and post-1989 history, maturing fields such as gender history, and less-represented fields such as medieval history and the history of the Habsburg lands are especially desired. The journal thus aims to be the primary venue for scholarly exchange and debate among scholars of the history of Central Europe.
The Journal of Hellenic Studies
Published for The Society for the Promotion of Hellenic Studies

Editor
Angus M. Bowie, University of Oxford, UK

The Journal of Hellenic Studies (JHS) is recognised internationally as one of the foremost periodicals in the field of classical scholarship. It contains articles on a wide variety of Hellenic topics including Greek language, literature, history and art and archaeology in the Ancient, Byzantine and Modern periods, as well as reviews of recent books of importance to Greek studies.

A subscription to JHS includes the annual volume of Archaeological Reports, which provide fully illustrated accounts of archaeological work in Greece and other parts of the world that are sites of Greek culture.

International Review of Social History
Published for the Internationaal Instituut voor Sociale Geschiedenis

Editor
Aad Blok, Internationaal Instituut voor Sociale Geschiedenis,
The Netherlands

International Review of Social History is one of the leading journals in its field. Truly global in its scope, it focuses on research in social and labour history from a comparative and transnational perspective, both in the modern and in the early modern period, and across periods. The journal combines quality, depth and originality of its articles with an open eye for theoretical innovation and new insights and methods from within its field and from contiguous disciplines. Besides research articles, it features surveys of new themes and subject fields, a suggestions and debates section, review essays and book reviews. It is esteemed for its annotated bibliography of social history titles, and also publishes an annual supplement of specially commissioned essays on a current theme. The 2011 special issue will examine ‘The Joy and Pain of Work: Global Attitudes and Valuations, 1500-1650’.
