

Supplementary Volume No. 10
(1985)

Aristotle and the Stoics
by F. H. SANDBACH

This essay maintains that the extent of influence exerted by Aristotle on the Stoics has often been exaggerated by modern scholars. A collection of all references to him by authors other than Peripatetics, whether contemporary or belonging to the following century, shows that his importance as a philosopher was not then recognised and reveals a lack of evidence that his school-works were known. Professor Sandbach argues that it is a mistake to proceed on the assumption that the Stoics must have known his work, or even an outline of it, and been stimulated, whether to agreement or to modification.

If the supposed evidence for Aristotelian influence is examined without this presumption, much is found to be flimsy and some can be confidently rejected. A residue remains of varying degrees of probability, which it is hard to estimate owing to our insufficient information, particularly about Zeno, about the Academy of his time, about Aristotle's exoteric works, and about memory of him in oral tradition.

---

Supplements and back numbers of the Proceedings are available to Members at a reduced rate:

Old Series 1882-1949    per volume = 50p ($1.50), Non-Members = 75p ($2.00)
(65 volumes)

New Series 1950-1982    per volume = £5.00 ($12.00), Non-Members = £6.00 ($15.00)
(28 volumes)

Supplements 1-6        per volume = £5.00 ($12.00), Non-Members = £6.00 ($15.00)

Supplements 7-10      per volume = £10.00 ($24.00), Non-Members = £12.50 ($30.00)

Prices do not include postage and packing. Payment, if made otherwise than in sterling, must be at the dollar price quoted or its equivalent. This is to cover bank charges.

Orders to be sent to: Dr C. Austin, Trinity Hall, Cambridge CB2 1TJ, England.

Printed in Great Britain at the University Printing Services, Cambridge.