International Migration Law in the Current Legal and Political Reality: Review of Research Handbook on International Law and Migration
Tally Kritzman-Amir
Israel Law Review is a peer-reviewed journal with a long-standing reputation for excellence, and attracts a combination of established authors and new voices writing on cutting edge topics. It is the oldest and most acclaimed Israeli law journal published in English, established in 1966.

Focusing on law in times of tension and conflict, the Israel Law Review is a leading publication in the field of human rights, public law and international law.

The Review is a peer-reviewed journal with a long-standing reputation for excellence, and attracts a combination of established authors and new voices writing on cutting edge topics. It is the oldest and most acclaimed Israeli law journal published in English, established in 1966.

The Israel Law Review is published under the auspices and management of the Minerva Center for Human Rights at the Law Faculty of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. Under this stewardship, it focuses on scholarship in the fields of human rights, public law and international law. It also examines the application of legal norms under conditions of conflict and political uncertainty, highlighting the relevance of the Israeli experience in these fields to other parts of the world and that of other societies to Israel.

Information for contributors
The Israel Law Review welcomes unsolicited articles and book reviews. For detailed submission instructions, see http://journals.cambridge.org/ur/tc

To be considered for publication and submitted to the review procedure, submissions should be within the scope of the Journal, as described on the inside front cover. Consideration will normally be given only to original material that has not previously been published. In exceptional cases material that is currently under review elsewhere will be considered. Authors are asked to indicate clearly with their submission if this is the case.

Submissions should be written in good English and so authors are encouraged to have their contributions edited for language prior to submission, where necessary.

Article submissions should contribute specifically to scholarly discussions in the fields of human rights, public law and/or international law, and normally be in the range of 8,000 to 15,000 words (including footnotes), although longer submissions may be accepted.

The Israel Law Review welcomes reviews of books covering the Journal’s areas of focus. Book reviews are subject to the standard review procedure. Books are not sent to unsolicited reviewers.

Submissions should be prepared in editable electronic word-processing format (MS Word) and emailed to: Professor Yaël Ronen, Academic Editor, ilr@savion.huji.ac.il
