BUILDING REGIMES

BUILDING REGIMES FOR NATURAL RESOURCES AND THE ENVIRONMENT

Oran R. Young

The notion of regimes as institutions that shape international behavior has received much attention from scholars in the field of international relations as a way of understanding how sovereign states secure international cooperation. Oran R. Young here provides case studies of four key types of international cooperation: marine fisheries management; licensing arrangements for deep-seabed mining; current and potential international guidelines for responses to future nuclear accidents; and the resolution of conflicts between Canada and the United States over rights to Arctic shipping. Cornell Studies in Political Economy

New for 1989!

INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL OF REFUGEE LAW

Editor: GUY S. GOODWIN-GILL,
Carleton University, Canada

This new journal will provide the fullest possible information on all aspects of refugee law, including not only scholarly articles and reviews, but also details about legislative changes affecting refugee law and relevant treaties, as well as news of meetings and conferences. The journal will contain up-to-date and indispensable information for anyone involved in the legal protection of refugees.

Recent and forthcoming articles include:

Refugee Law and the Protection of Refugees, by the Editor-in-Chief and the Members of the Editorial Board

The Language of Protection, by Guy S. Goodwin-Gill

Asylum and Refugee Protection in Thailand, by Arthur C. Helton

JOURNAL OF ENVIRONMENTAL LAW

Editor: RICHARD MACRORY, Imperial College Centre for Environmental Technology

Few people would dispute that environmental issues and the laws that cover them are becoming increasingly complex. The new Journal of Environmental Law has been established to provide an authoritative and broad-ranging analysis of work in the field. The journal is aimed at both academics and professionals and will survey environmental law in Britain, Europe, and the United States.

INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL OF LAW AND THE FAMILY

Editors: JOHN EEKELAAR, Pembroke College, Oxford, and ROBERT DINGWALL, Centre for Socio-Legal Studies, Wolfson College, Oxford

The International Journal of Law and the Family provides a unique forum for dialogue between lawyers and social scientists. It has already been widely acclaimed for its role as a common source through which each group may gain access to the insights of the other. "This new journal will become an important holding for law libraries throughout the world and a valuable repository of information and theory for lawyers and social scientists."

CONTENTS: VOLUME III (1986)

Legal Considerations on the International Status of Jerusalem - Antonio Cassese - examines the complex issues of sovereignty over West and East Jerusalem and the legal responsibility of the United Nations in this respect.

Sharon vs Time: The Criminal Responsibility under International Law for Civilian Massacres - Linda Malone - analyses the criminal responsibility of Sharon for the Sabra and Shatilla civilian massacres under both U.S. and international law.

Law Reports - are mainly dedicated to the human rights question of deportation of Palestinian civilians. From Israeli records there are three leading Supreme Court judgments on deportation and one judgment on family reunion. These are followed by a compilation of Israel's laws of deportation as enacted by Israel in pre- and post- 1967 occupation. The late Palestinian Attorney, Aziz Shehadeh, analyses the issue of deportation in the light of the relevant Mandate and Jordanian laws that existed in the West Bank before it was occupied by Israel in 1967. A study on the policy of deportation as pursued by the Israeli authorities in the Occupied Territories is also reproduced.

The Reports cover the judgment of the Sudanese Special Security Court in the Falashas case.

Special Report - includes the first part of the Arab Boycott Regulations; this is probably the first up-to-date English version of these Regulations.

The Warsaw Convention Annotated: A Legal Handbook

edited by Lawrence B. Goldhirsch, Fuchsberg & Fuchsberg,
Counselors at Law, New York City

1988                      ISBN 90-247-3619-6                      432 pp.                      $135.00

Technology and the economics of aviation have changed in ways unforeseeable to the authors of the Warsaw Convention; nevertheless, the Convention's signatories have struggled, through their domestic courts, to follow its rules of liability. This unique, single-source reference has become an essential tool for lawyers, non-lawyers and judges by providing the information they need quickly and easily regarding international air transportation issues. The handbook will save you hours of research time because it is arranged in the same order as the Articles of the Warsaw Convention and it lets readers "zero in" on the information they need. Also included are: decisions from various countries, which give differing viewpoints; the effects of later treaties and agreements; practical hints involving airlines, passengers and cargo shippers; and references to other unforeseen problems facing litigants and their lawyers.

Law and Policy in the Space Stations' Era

by Andrew J. Young

1988                      ISBN 90-247-3722-2                      352 pp.                      $95.00

This book addresses the policy implications for all current participants in the Space Stations' Era, and presents scientific and technological developments. Law and Policy in the Space Stations' Era is divided into three sections: the constitutional perspective of the treaty-making process in the space field; the optimum framework for the management of the US/International Space Station based on a review of the most significant cooperative agreements concluded over the past 25 years; and a presentation of the range and complexity of the commercial issues involved.

WAR, AGGRESSION AND SELF-DEFENCE

Yoram Dinstein

Professor of International Law and Yanowicz Professor of Human Rights, Tel Aviv University

This book re-examines the topics of war, aggression and self-defence, as well as related issues, such as collective security and the use of force short of war.

The first part deals with such questions as: What is war? When does it commence and terminate? What is the difference between peace treaties, armistice agreements and cease-fires? Where can war be waged and what is the meaning of neutrality?

The focus of the discussion in the second part is the contemporary prohibition of the use of force and its standing as jus cogens. The meaning of aggression is explored. The concept of crimes against peace, which evolved in the Nuremberg trial, is examined. Some controversial implications of the illegality and criminality of war are analyzed.

The third part explores the concept of self-defence. The scope of armed attack, prior to the exercise of the right of self-defence, is investigated, distinguishing between attacks launched by a foreign State and those that are carried out from its territory by armed bands. Special attention is given to such disputed points as the legality of armed reprisals and the protection of nationals abroad.

Philippe J. Sands

Research Fellow in International Law at St. Catharine's College and Research Associate at the Research Centre for International Law, University of Cambridge

Chernobyl: Law and Communication brings together in full the up-to-date texts of the most important materials necessary for a comprehensive examination of the international law and communication issues arising from nuclear accidents with trans-boundary effects.

The texts reproduced include multilateral and bilateral treaties, non-binding acts of international organizations and private associations of scholars, and national legislation. Each text is introduced by a Note summarizing its background and main provisions, and is accompanied by a select bibliography.

In his Introduction the editor discusses the current law by reference to the texts. Both the texts and his conclusions will be a convenient reference work for those interested in international law, as well as in communication, environmental and nuclear issues.
