CONTENTS

131 Role models that make you unhappy: light paternalism, social learning, and welfare
Christian Schubert and Christian Cordes

161 Does religiosity promote property rights and the rule of law?
Niclas Berggren and Christian Bjørnskov

187 Studying institutions in the context of natural selection: limits or opportunities?
Yael Boyer and Michael Bang Petersen

199 'Model-Platonism' in economics: on a classical epistemological critique
Jakob Kapeller

223 'Ownership' by A. M. Honore
Fragment: Geoffrey M. Hodgson
organizations. It welcomes contributions by all households and other vital institutions and organizations. It is dedicated to the development of cutting edge research and includes contributions by all schools of thought, including the World Bank, have recognized the importance of institutions in economic development. The Noble Prize has been awarded to Ronald Coase, Douglass North, Gunnar Myrdal and Simon Kuznets for their pioneering work in institutional economics.

“The Journal of Institutional Economics is devoted to the study of the nature, role and evolution of institutions in the economy, including firms, state, households and other vital institutions and organizations. It is dedicated to the development of cutting edge research, including the World Bank, have recognized the importance of institutions in economic development. The Nobel Prize has been awarded to Ronald Coase, Douglass North, Gunnar Myrdal and Simon Kuznets for their pioneering work in institutional economics.

The Journal of Institutional Economics is devoted to the study of the nature, role and evolution of institutions in the economy, including firms, state, households and other vital institutions and organizations.

The Journal of Institutional Economics is devoted to the study of the nature, role and evolution of institutions in the economy, including firms, state, households and other vital institutions and organizations. It is dedicated to the development of cutting edge research, including contributions by all schools of thought, including the World Bank, have recognized the importance of institutions in economic development. The Nobel Prize has been awarded to Ronald Coase, Douglass North, Gunnar Myrdal and Simon Kuznets for their pioneering work in institutional economics.

The Journal of Institutional Economics is devoted to the study of the nature, role and evolution of institutions in the economy, including firms, state, households and other vital institutions and organizations.

The Journal of Institutional Economics is devoted to the study of the nature, role and evolution of institutions in the economy, including firms, state, households and other vital institutions and organizations. It is dedicated to the development of cutting edge research, including contributions by all schools of thought, including the World Bank, have recognized the importance of institutions in economic development. The Nobel Prize has been awarded to Ronald Coase, Douglass North, Gunnar Myrdal and Simon Kuznets for their pioneering work in institutional economics.

The Journal of Institutional Economics is devoted to the study of the nature, role and evolution of institutions in the economy, including firms, state, households and other vital institutions and organizations.

The Journal of Institutional Economics is devoted to the study of the nature, role and evolution of institutions in the economy, including firms, state, households and other vital institutions and organizations. It is dedicated to the development of cutting edge research, including contributions by all schools of thought, including the World Bank, have recognized the importance of institutions in economic development. The Nobel Prize has been awarded to Ronald Coase, Douglass North, Gunnar Myrdal and Simon Kuznets for their pioneering work in institutional economics.

The Journal of Institutional Economics is devoted to the study of the nature, role and evolution of institutions in the economy, including firms, state, households and other vital institutions and organizations. It is dedicated to the development of cutting edge research, including contributions by all schools of thought, including the World Bank, have recognized the importance of institutions in economic development. The Nobel Prize has been awarded to Ronald Coase, Douglass North, Gunnar Myrdal and Simon Kuznets for their pioneering work in institutional economics.

The Journal of Institutional Economics is devoted to the study of the nature, role and evolution of institutions in the economy, including firms, state, households and other vital institutions and organizations.

The Journal of Institutional Economics is devoted to the study of the nature, role and evolution of institutions in the economy, including firms, state, households and other vital institutions and organizations. It is dedicated to the development of cutting edge research, including contributions by all schools of thought, including the World Bank, have recognized the importance of institutions in economic development. The Nobel Prize has been awarded to Ronald Coase, Douglass North, Gunnar Myrdal and Simon Kuznets for their pioneering work in institutional economics.

The Journal of Institutional Economics is devoted to the study of the nature, role and evolution of institutions in the economy, including firms, state, households and other vital institutions and organizations.

The Journal of Institutional Economics is devoted to the study of the nature, role and evolution of institutions in the economy, including firms, state, households and other vital institutions and organizations. It is dedicated to the development of cutting edge research, including contributions by all schools of thought, including the World Bank, have recognized the importance of institutions in economic development. The Nobel Prize has been awarded to Ronald Coase, Douglass North, Gunnar Myrdal and Simon Kuznets for their pioneering work in institutional economics.

The Journal of Institutional Economics is devoted to the study of the nature, role and evolution of institutions in the economy, including firms, state, households and other vital institutions and organizations.

The Journal of Institutional Economics is devoted to the study of the nature, role and evolution of institutions in the economy, including firms, state, households and other vital institutions and organizations. It is dedicated to the development of cutting edge research, including contributions by all schools of thought, including the World Bank, have recognized the importance of institutions in economic development. The Nobel Prize has been awarded to Ronald Coase, Douglass North, Gunnar Myrdal and Simon Kuznets for their pioneering work in institutional economics.

The Journal of Institutional Economics is devoted to the study of the nature, role and evolution of institutions in the economy, including firms, state, households and other vital institutions and organizations.

The Journal of Institutional Economics is devoted to the study of the nature, role and evolution of institutions in the economy, including firms, state, households and other vital institutions and organizations. It is dedicated to the development of cutting edge research, including contributions by all schools of thought, including the World Bank, have recognized the importance of institutions in economic development. The Nobel Prize has been awarded to Ronald Coase, Douglass North, Gunnar Myrdal and Simon Kuznets for their pioneering work in institutional economics.

The Journal of Institutional Economics is devoted to the study of the nature, role and evolution of institutions in the economy, including firms, state, households and other vital institutions and organizations.

The Journal of Institutional Economics is devoted to the study of the nature, role and evolution of institutions in the economy, including firms, state, households and other vital institutions and organizations. It is dedicated to the development of cutting edge research, including contributions by all schools of thought, including the World Bank, have recognized the importance of institutions in economic development. The Nobel Prize has been awarded to Ronald Coase, Douglass North, Gunnar Myrdal and Simon Kuznets for their pioneering work in institutional economics.
CONTENTS

131–159 Role models that make you unhappy: light paternalism, social learning, and welfare
Christian Schubert and Christian Cordes

161–185 Does religiosity promote property rights and the rule of law?
Niclas Berggren and Christian Bjornskov

187–198 Studying institutions in the context of natural selection: limits or opportunities?
Pascal Boyer and Michael Bang Petersen

199–221 ‘Model-Platonism’ in economics: on a classical epistemological critique
Jakob Kapeller

223–255 ‘Ownership’ by A. M. Honoré
Fragment: Geoffrey M. Hodgson