THE ANTIQUARIES JOURNAL

The Antiquaries Journal aims to reflect the multi-disciplinary nature of the study of material culture, publishing a balanced mix of papers from all periods, from prehistory to the recent past. The Journal seeks papers that address research questions from a variety of perspectives, combining, for example, historical, art historical, architectural, linguistic, archaeological and scientific data.

Communications should be sent to the Journal Editor, The Society of Antiquaries of London, Burlington House, Piccadilly, London W1J 0BE

Guidance for contributors
Papers accepted for publication in the Antiquaries Journal are published online as soon as the final proofs have been passed by the author(s); hence we are able to offer swift digital publication that does not depend on an annual print cycle. We can also accept papers at any time of the year, though to appear in the annual printed volume that is published in October each year, the final and complete paper must have been submitted no later than 31 March of that year.

The content of the Journal is multi-disciplinary, multi-national and multi-period, reflecting a broad range of research based on the study of the material remains of the past – including all aspects of history, archaeology, art and architecture, conservation, heraldry, anthropological, ecclesiastical, documentary, musical, linguistic study and landscape study. In particular, the Antiquaries Journal seeks papers that take an overview of a specific period, issue or set of problems, that are based on primary research, and that make a genuine research contribution to their field of study.

As the primary publication of a learned society that has been in existence for over 300 years and whose Fellows have helped to shape their evolving disciplines, the Antiquaries Journal is also interested in papers that place people, ideas and concepts within an historical context and that examine the development of antiquarian observation and thinking within the wider spheres of the histories of science and the humanities. This includes the influence of antiquarian thought on the fields of public heritage policy, ethics and practice.

The Journal accepts papers of up to 10,000 words. Appendices and datasets that support research papers but which are too long for publication in the Journal can be published online as supplementary material.

The Journal reaches a diverse international readership from academics and professionals involved in primary research to students and wider public audiences. The readership is scholarly and well informed, but contributions should be presented in such a way as to be accessible to those whose specialities lie in fields other than those of the author(s).

All papers submitted to the Journal for consideration undergo an initial editorial assessment and, should they be considered suitable, are sent for peer review, following which they might be referred back to the author(s) for further work.

Detailed guidance on the preparation of papers for publication and on house style (including the style of footnotes and bibliographies) can be found on Cambridge Core at https://www.cambridge.org/core/journals/antiquaries-journal/information/instructions-contributors.
