ALL E.R.

The Lawyer's First Choice

There is no official series of law reports in this country and, indeed, there is no need for one, since the reports at present published under the well-established independent system satisfy every modern requirement of efficiency and reliability. The only problem is that of selection.

Most lawyers prefer to use THE ALL ENGLAND LAW REPORTS—the original weekly series of reports with full judgments. The ALL E.R., with its weekly circulation of over 12,000 copies to registered subscribers alone, is the most widely used series of reports today, consulted and quoted everywhere. There is no other series which can offer such a comprehensive service to subscribers, on such reasonable terms. Send for a specimen issue and the descriptive brochure, so that you can see for yourself how the ALL E.R., by service to the legal profession, has won for itself so large a following which is still growing with the years.

EXECUTIVE DISCRETION and
JUDICIAL CONTROL

An Aspect of the Conseil d'Etat

By C. J. HAMSON

Ought the actions of the Executive in England to be subject to the kind of review which is available in France? There, the Conseil d'Etat claims authority over the grounds and substance of the administrative decision. How did the Conseil d'Etat come to have such powers? How does it exercise them? Upon what principles of law does it act? In this book the Author makes direct comparison between the practice in the two countries.
