Journal of Global History

VOLUME 5 PART 3 • NOVEMBER 2010

Contents

ARTICLES

353 'Even in the remotest corners of the world': globalized piracy and international law, 1500–1900
Michael Kempe

373 New and old peripheries: Britain, the Baltic, and the Americas in the Great Divergence
Klas Rönnbäck

395 Creating a local black identity in a global context: the French writer Alexandre Dumas as an African American lieu de mémoire
Eric Martone

423 A British sea: making sense of global space in the late nineteenth century
Tamson Pietsch

447 Raising revenue in the British empire, 1870–1940: how 'extractive' were colonial taxes?
Ewout Frankema

479 Mobilizing labour in African agriculture: the role of the International Colonial Institute in the elaboration of a standard of colonial administration, 1895–1930
Benoît Daviron

REVIEW ARTICLE

503 A conjuncture in global history or an Anglo-American construct: the British Industrial Revolution, 1700–1850
Patrick O'Brien

511 REVIEWS