HEALTH AT THE GATEWAY

By E. W. HOPE

Professor of Public Health in the University of Liverpool

With 25 plates, maps, and plans. Demy 8vo. 15s. net

A history of the administrative developments affecting the Public Health of the city and port of Liverpool. Few workers for the public good in great cities have the inclination or the opportunity to record for the benefit of their colleagues the results of their own experience in administration and the history of past efforts. In this book Professor Hope has told the story of the growth of a great city and the gradual assumption by competent authority of power to control the public services.

"This detailed history of the development of collective care for the public health in one of our leading seaport cities can but stimulate the imagination of all engaged in local administrative work. It should interest every one concerned either with hygiene or with social welfare generally."
