CONTENTS

Editorial
Editors’ comment

Articles
Davidson, K. French pretensions
Zhao, K., Guo, X. and Gao, X. Learning English to fly: A study of Chinese cargo airline pilots’ learning engagement
Mohr, S. and Ochieng, D. Language usage in everyday life and in education: current attitudes towards English in Tanzania
Botha, W. The use of English in the social network of a student in South China
Ankerstein, C. Germans are not aiming for a fossilized form of English: A response to Booth (2015)
Xu, M. and Tian, C. Is ‘NBA’ Chinese or English?
Kang, H.-S. Is English being challenged by Mandarin in South Korea?
Achiri-Taboh, B. The ‘ph’ of English orthography; a digraph or a sequence of separate phonemes?
Roig-Marín, A. The Anglicisation of word formations: cross-linguistic blends in Spanish

Reviews
Dedmon, A. What would Defoe do?
Hu, F. Principles, practices and problems in teaching EIL
Zhang, Y. Exploring language in use
Wu, J. Retrospection and Expectation

- Pretentious? Moi?
- English-flavoured Spanish
- High-flying English
- Mandarin and English go head to head
- The place of English-lettered words in China
- Sounds and symbols—the shepherd phenomenon
- Choosing languages in Tanzania
- Pronouncing English the German way
- REVIEWS
- Communicating cultural identity
- The practice of EIL teaching
- To grips with the basics of communication
- English for new arrivals