NEW TITLES

World Population Policy: An Annotated Bibliography

Edwin R. Driver, University of Massachusetts, Amherst

A fully annotated survey of the literature on world population policies. Over 3500 entries cover the entire range of demographic variables, from fertility to the quality of population. Compilations from every available source, both domestic and foreign, include translations from such diverse languages as Arabic, Czech, Thai, and Korean. This comprehensive reference work is designed to facilitate research and population policy decision-making. ca. 1000 pages April ca. $35.00

Food Aid and International Agricultural Trade

A Study in Legal and Administrative Control

Robert L. Bard, University of Connecticut

A major study of food aid programs and their impact upon international trade, the recipient country's development and the donor country. Contributes toward a more effective use of food aid as a development tool by analyzing and evaluating all major administrative and legal devices for keeping food aid transactions within acceptable bounds. 240 pages April $12.50

Central American Integration

Isaac Cohen Orantes, Harvard University

A critical examination of the results and impact of Central American regional integration on the development of participating countries. Describes the process in its economic, political, and historical contexts, and analyzes two major external influences on integration, the United Nations Economic Commission and the United States Government. 160 pages February $10.00

Cuban Foreign Policy and Chilean Politics

Miles D. Wolpin, St. Francis Xavier University

A detailed study of Cuban and United States efforts to influence party alignments and to direct policy changes in Chile. Important for its objective analysis of the impact of the Cuban revolution on Chilean politics and more generally the effects of capitalism on open societies. 308 pages February $15.00
