Contributors to This Issue

ROSAMUND JOHNSTON is a postdoctoral fellow at the University of Vienna's Research Center for the History of Transformations (RECET, Spitalgasse 2/ Hof 1.1, Campus, 1090 Wien, Germany; email: rosamund.johnston@univie.ac.at). She is the author of Havel v Americe (2019). Her current research maps the global history of socialist Czechoslovakia through its arms trade.

MARK T. KETTLER is a Postdoctoral Research Associate of the Nanovic Institute for European Studies (University of Notre Dame, Notre Dame, IN 46556, USA; email: mkettler@nd.edu). A historian of Germany and East-Central Europe, he studies imperialism and colonialism to analyze larger questions of national identity and the relationship of ethnic minorities to the modern state. His current book project, provisionally entitled The Knight, Death, and the Devil, argues that the German occupation of Russian Poland in WWI fundamentally transformed how German military, political, and intellectual elites understood the relationship between ethnic diversity and imperial stability. Mark received his PhD in history from the University of California, Berkeley, in 2018. He is author of "Designing Empire for the Civilized East: Colonialism, Polish Nationhood, and German War Aims in the First World War" (Nationalities Papers, 2019), and "What did Paul Rohrbach Actually Learn in Africa?: The Influence of Colonial Experience on a Publicist's Imperial Fantasies in Eastern Europe" (German History, 2020).

WILLIAM L. PATCH earned his PhD in German history at Yale University in 1981 and has taught history at Grinnell College and at Washington and Lee University since 2005 (Washington and Lee University, 204 West Washington Street, Lexington, VA 24450, USA; email: patchw@wlu.edu). He has published the monographs The Christian Trade Unions in the Weimar Republic, Heinrich Brüning and the Dissolution of the Weimar Republic, and Christian Democratic Workers and the Forging of German Democracy, 1920–1980.

BOOK REVIEWS

LIVING IN TWO WORLDS

DIARIES OF A JEWISH COUPLE IN GERMANY AND IN EXILE

ELSE BEHREND-ROSENFELD AND SIEGFRIED ROSENFELD

Edited by Marita Krauss, Universität Augsburg and Erich Kasberger

Translator: Deborah Langton

'The horrors of persecution and exile common to so many German Jews and opponents of the Hitler regime is brought home in searing detail in the interwoven diaries and letters of the Rosenfelds. They capture the struggle to find ways to survive in a world increasingly abnormal and threatening, an experience from the Third Reich that encapsulates the suffering of all those whose lives were destroyed by politics in the age of European dictatorship.'

RICHARD OVERY, University of Exeter

'Else Behrend-Rosenfeld's perceptive and lucidly written diary provides a unique perspective into the persecution of the Jewish community of Munich and her own life in hiding in Nazi Germany. The diary and accompanying documents have been superbly edited and contextualized by Marita Krauss and Erich Kasberger.'

SUSANNA SCHRAFSTETTER, University of Vermont

Published since 1968, Central European History is the primary venue for scholarly exchange and debate of central Europe's diverse and complex history. The journal publishes on a range of topics, bringing research articles, book and film reviews and review essays, discussion fora, and other forms of scholarly writing to a broad audience of specialists and non-specialists in four issues per year. Spanning the medieval to the modern period, CEH offers a space for creative approaches to understanding the region's past, while continually reassessing its conceptual and geographic boundaries and their representations. CEH publishes work related to German-speaking and German-identified peoples, as well as work on non-German-speakers in the historic states and regions of central Europe, including the Habsburg lands, Austria, and Switzerland. The journal welcomes submissions that expand and de-territorialize the region's historic frames of reference, taking identity, language, and space—and the complex links and ruptures among them—seriously. CEH perennially engages anew the old question, “what and where is central Europe?”

Editorial Policy

Central European History welcomes manuscripts using all approaches to history and dealing with all historical periods. Because space is limited, the journal does not accept articles that have been or will be published elsewhere. Most research articles are 10–12,000 words, including notes. Manuscripts submitted to Central European History should not be under consideration by any other journal. If the Editor learns that an article Central European History is considering is also under submission at another journal, Central European History's consideration will cease. Book Reviews range from 800–1000 words and are commissioned by the Associate Editor. Unsolicited book reviews are not accepted. Authors may submit articles in languages other than English but only after consulting the Editor. Some financial support may be available to defray the costs of translation into English if a manuscript is accepted.

All article manuscripts should be submitted via ScholarOne (<https://mc.manuscript-central.com/ccc>). Authors should please take care to remove any information that might identify them as author, and follow the prompts in ScholarOne to make their manuscripts anonymous. The entire text of all manuscripts, including footnotes and headings, must be prepared in double-spaced typescript with generous margins to allow for copyediting. Footnotes must be numbered consecutively.

All materials will be edited to conform with The Chicago Manual of Style in matters of punctuation, capitalization, and format. Final decisions on style remain with the editor.
