Moshoeshoe of Lesotho 1786–1870

---

Leonard Thompson

---

Moshoeshoe grew up in the interior of southern Africa when it was still isolated from the wider world. He began to build a kingdom when his home was invaded by other Africans, but for the rest of his life he struggled to preserve for his people as much territory, social cohesion, and political autonomy as he could in the face of white expansion. The modern state of Lesotho, independent again since 1966 after nearly a century of British overrule, is his legacy. Illustrated £9.50 paper covers £2.50

A Political Biography

Zewde Gabre-Sellassie

---

The reunification of the Ethiopian Empire during the period 1868–89 is a theme scarcely touched upon by contemporary chronicles or later scholars. The author shows how it was Johannes IV, and not Tewodoros or Menelik, who fulfilled the ideal of imperial unity, resisting threats to the independence of his country from without and the disruptive forces at work within. £9.50 Oxford Studies in African Affairs

THE GEOGRAPHY OF MODERN AFRICA

Second Edition

WILLIAM A. HANCE

This is a fully revised edition of one of the most respected works of economic geography. Focusing on the present state of economic development in Africa and the potentialities for future development, the book remains the most comprehensive economic and geographic assessment of the continent yet written. Illustrated with over 120 maps, 260 photographs, plus charts and tables. $17.50

POPULATION GROWTH AND SOCIOECONOMIC CHANGE IN WEST AFRICA

JOHN C. CALDWELL, Editor

With the collaboration of Nelson O. Addo,
Samuel K. Gaisie, Adenola A. Igun, and
P. O. Olusanya

This work, sponsored by the Ford Foundation and the Population Council, gives the first up-to-date view of population topics across the entire West African region. Including both anglophone and francophone countries, this volume provides the first English-language report on population trends and research in many francophone countries. The unique regional approach of this volume enables the contributors to trace trends through all the countries involved and, further, to see the implications of population growth and changes in standard of living. $30.00

The Design of Rural Development

Lessons from Africa

Uma Lele

Between 85 and 95 percent of the nearly 310 million people in sub-Saharan Africa live in rural areas. Most exist on meager annual incomes of less than $100 per capita, based largely on low-productivity agriculture and livestock.

The purpose of this World Bank study is to identify new ways of designing rural development projects which effectively reach large numbers of low-income rural people and are viable within the financial and manpower resource limits of the area. A World Bank Research Publication.

$12.00 hardcover, $3.95 paperback

Kenya Into the Second Decade

World Bank Country Economic Report

This report examines the operation of Kenyan economy since independence in 1963 and suggests prescriptions to further the country's development in its second decade. The report offers a sharp macroeconomic view. Drawing on but not restating the prolific economic literature on Kenya, it attempts to consolidate and integrate detailed knowledge of the economy into an overall understanding of the way it operates. It also considers the experience of other developing countries in relating policy decisions to economic performance.

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the businessman, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.
