RESEARCH INFECTION CONTROL NURSES

NewYork-Presbyterian Hospital is currently seeking two Research Infection Control Nurses to be a part of a newly established program in Hospital Acquired Infections. The program will involve the use of medical informatics to improve real-time surveillance and its practical application to policy development, staff education and outcomes assessment. The selected candidates will serve at either the Weill Cornell Medical Center or the Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center and will report to the Director of the Program and the Hospital Epidemiologists. A Bachelor's degree in Nursing is required; a Master's degree is preferred. Infection control experience desirable.

For immediate consideration, please fax a letter of interest and CV to: Executive Recruitment Committee; 212-305-0891. We are an equal opportunity employer.

DIRECTOR

Hospital Acquired Infections Program

NewYork-Presbyterian Hospital's Department of Epidemiology, in cooperation with Weill Cornell Medical College and Columbia University Health Sciences, is currently seeking a Physician to direct a recently established Hospital Acquired Infections Program in collaboration with the current Infection Control Program at both campuses. In this role, you will oversee the application of modern informatics to improve real-time infection surveillance integrated with policy development, staff education, program implementation and outcomes assessment. Candidates should be board certified/eligible in Infectious Diseases and possess formal training in Medical Informatics. Epidemiology experience is preferred. This is an Assistant/Associate Professor level position with dual appointments at the Cornell and Columbia campuses.

For immediate consideration, please fax a letter of interest and CV to: Executive Recruitment Committee, 212-305-0891. We are an equal opportunity employer.
