Teaching and Learning Languages

Earl W. Stevick

An important new book by one of the most distinguished contemporary writers on language teaching.

- * A thoroughly readable, down-to-earth book for teachers of any language.
- * Discusses how and why learning takes place.
- * Describes successful language-teaching techniques and examines the choices open to the teacher.
- * Written with the beginning teacher in mind, but contains much to interest the more experienced teacher.
- * Provides the essential knowledge of phonology and grammar needed by all language teachers.

Joint Language Teaching Library*

The British Council and CILT jointly maintain the Language-Teaching Library at 20 Carlton House Terrace, London SW1Y 5AP. The library contains over 25,000 volumes and subscribes to some 400 periodicals, including those from which the articles abstracted in this journal are taken. All articles abstracted may be consulted in the library (open 0930–1730, Monday–Friday). (Requests for photocopies – see preface.) The library also compiles specialised bibliographies on various aspects of language teaching and research, and stocks British Council and CILT publications. It has extensive holdings of published courses and teaching materials with facilities for hearing and viewing non-book components. A register of research relevant to language teaching is available for reference.

Language Teaching

The international abstracting journal for language teachers and applied linguists

Language Teaching and Linguistics: Abstracts is changing its name from 1982 to Language Teaching to emphasise its function as an indispensable tool for everyone concerned with the teaching and learning of foreign languages. It will maintain the following important features which have made it such a popular publication:

- * articles from nearly 400 journals from all parts of the world are selected and abstracted by experts
- * it offers comprehensive cover of the field for its readers in a compact and inexpensive form so that practising teachers, teacher trainers, applied linguists, students, research workers, writers and educational administrators can keep up to date with a minimum expenditure of time and money
- * it encourages cross-fertilisation of ideas between those concerned with the teaching of different foreign languages (e.g. French, English, German) as well as between practising teachers, applied linguists and educational researchers
- * it makes international experience published in many languages accessible to an English-reading audience
- * information about good practice in classroom teaching and effective language learning as well as the latest research findings
- * sources of further information for in-depth study in the form of bibliographies on particular topics and annotations of recent publications
- * details of research projects in various countries

Published Quarterly

Changes from 1982 include:

- * 20% greater coverage
- * greater emphasis on teaching methods and materials
- * as a special feature, a state-of-the-art survey article on a major subject in language teaching in every issue
- * subject and author indexes in every issue
- * full list of periodicals scanned in every January issue
