

Functionalism and World Politics

United Nations Programs Financing Economic Development

By James P. Sewell

This book evaluates the functional approach to international organization as a theory and in relation to several programs within the United Nations system: the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, the International Finance Corporation, the International Development Association, and the U.N. Special Fund.

The Corfu Incident of 1923

Mussolini and the League of Nations

By James Barros

Working with newly available archival materials, the author gives a detailed account of Mussolini's occupation of the Greek island of Corfu in 1923 and the negotiations (among Italy, Greece, France, and Britain)—crucial to the inexperienced League of Nations and to Mussolini's future—that led to settlement of the crisis.

THE DYNAMICS OF INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATION

The Making of World Order

By Philip E. Jacob and Alexine L. Atherton, both of the University of Pennsylvania

"In this book, . . . the authors . . . analyze the problems of international organization and of the making of world order from the most meaningful angle.

. . . . For international organizations are not ends in themselves; they are means to ends—ends of high significance to humanity. This correlation of means and ends is elaborated with great clarity by the authors who contribute to a much needed increase of understanding of the nature and scope of the tasks and of the performance of international organizations in coping with them."

from the Foreword, by Andrew W. Cordier, Dean, School of International Affairs, Columbia University.
