ROBERT CRAFT

Robert Craft is best known as a conductor and a musical scholar. But the wider range of his interests has been shown over the years through his critical writings and is revealed here in a new collection of review articles that reflect his inquiring and original mind.

Whether the subject is Schoenberg’s letters to Kandinsky, understanding Toscanini, memories of Glenn Gould, or Schumann and psychosis, Craft develops a full-blooded essay, written with wit and refinement, and based on both a careful analysis of the works in question and a personal background of assiduous reading and research.

The fifty essays in Small Craft Advisories will confirm Robert Craft as one of America’s most intelligent and fastidious critics, quick to skewer humbug and unstinting in his praise of excellence.

“It was then I realised my playing days were over.”

After a life in which perfection was the aim, imagine the heart-stopping moment when a musician realises all is not well.

A note not quite reached, a passage they knew backwards but now can’t quite manage.

These are the signs that a musician has come to the end of a life giving pleasure to others. But you can help.

Just as musicians have bestowed their gifts on us we can give something back to them.

A donation to the Musicians Benevolent Fund could help them come to terms with their loss.

Even better, remember the Fund in your Will. In that way your love of music can live on for others to enjoy.
