Irish Journal of Psychological Medicine
The official journal of the College of Psychiatrists of Ireland

The Key Papers are:
- Mental health impacts of COVID-19 in Ireland and the need for a secondary care mental health service response
  O’Connor, K., Wrigley, M., Jennings, R., Hill, M. & Niazi, A.
- Impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on patients with pre-existing anxiety disorders attending secondary care
  Plunkett, R., Costello, S., McGovern, M., McDonald, C. & Hallahan, B.
- Psychiatrist experience of remote consultations by telephone in an outpatient psychiatric department during the COVID-19 pandemic
  Olwill, C., McNally, D. & Douglas L.
- COVID-19 pandemic: mental health and beyond – the Indian perspective
  Mukherjee, A., Bandopadhyay, G. & Chatterjee, S. S.
Aims and Scope: Established in 1982, the Irish Journal of Psychological Medicine is dedicated to acting as an international forum for the publication of research on the science and practice of psychiatry. Its main aim is to disseminate original scientific research to a national and international readership with the objective of improving clinical practice and service development in mental health. The journal advocates for delivering high quality clinical care and improvement in mental health services, and is committed to keeping the field of mental health vibrant and relevant by publishing research on novel topics. Particular strengths and unique features of the journal include a focus on Clinical Psychiatry, Youth Mental Health and the History of Psychiatry, with regular features and special issues devoted to these topics.

The Irish Journal of Psychological Medicine publishes research papers, short reports, review papers, editorials, case reports, historical papers, perspective pieces and book reviews. There are four editions published per year, for which rapid peer review process and publication is considered a priority. The journal regularly publishes special themed editions guest edited by internationally respected academics in a particular research field. With a progressive focus, the journal provides important reading for clinicians, researchers, policymakers and all professionals with an interest in mental health.

© College of Psychiatrists of Ireland 2021