

Editorial

I am pleased to note that this journal has been accepted for indexing by Social Science Citation Index, and that our contents page will henceforth appear in Current Contents, Social and Behavioural Sciences. These sources, in addition to the ten abstracting or indexing services which have already included CJA/RCV in their service, greatly expand the attention which authors of articles in this journal will receive internationally.

Editorial appointments to the Journal are on a rotating basis. With this volume year, we welcome three new Editors. These are Evelyn Shapiro for the Health Sciences, John Carlson for Biological Sciences, and Michael MacLean for Social Welfare. I would like to express my profound gratitude to the three out-going Editors who donated enormous amounts of time to making the Journal a success. These are Lilian Wells, outgoing Social Welfare Editor, Mel Ball, who served as Biological Sciences Editor, and Art Kraus, the outgoing Health Sciences Editor. I appreciate not only their efforts in conducting a rigorous but constructive review process, but also their good advice and counsel.

I would also like to thank Louise Plouffe, who joined the Social Sciences Editor in editing our previous issue on francophone gerontology. Her talents and generous time commitment to the Journal are evident in the fine issue published as Volume 7, No. 4.

The Journal is expanding in size, in order to accommodate a healthy flow of manuscripts without undue lag in the time to publication. We welcome submissions.
