The North American Conference on British Studies

The Journal of British Studies, founded in 1961, is published by the University of Chicago Press under the auspices of the North American Conference on British Studies (NACBS). It was the result of the imaginative generosity of a Trinity College alumnus, Frederick E. Hasler (Hon. LL.D. 1957), who contributed funds to the college for the specific purpose of establishing a learned periodical in the field of British history.

The North American Conference on British Studies is a scholarly society affiliated with the American Historical Association and open to anyone in the United States and Canada interested in British civilization in its several aspects: historical, archaeological, literary, artistic, political, and sociological. Its North American constituency comprises about eight hundred members drawn from the fifty states and ten provinces. Affiliated with the parent organization are seven regional conferences (New England, Middle Atlantic, South, Midwest, Western, Pacific Coast, and Northwest) each having its own offices and programs and with a combined membership of more than two thousand. The Conference convenes at least once a year in the autumn, usually in joint session with one of its regional affiliates. It seeks to encourage the serious study of British history, literature, and politics, as well as allied subjects, and among the general reading public through meetings, book prizes, and association with likeminded organizations in North America and Britain and through its publication program.

The Conference sponsors a wide variety of publications. Another journal, Albion, issued four times a year at Appalachian State University, Boone, North Carolina, and sent to all members of the parent organization, includes articles, proceedings of all meetings, and book reviews. The Conference’s newsletter, the British Studies Intelligencer, also sent to members, is published at Georgetown University, and contains notices of meetings devoted to British studies, news of appointments, moves, and retirements, and notes on current publications and research in progress. Other publications appear periodically and will be noted at such times.

The Conference awards the following book prizes: the British Council Prize in the Humanities ($750), awarded through an annual grant by the British Embassy, Washington, D.C., in association with the British Council in the United Kingdom, and given to the best book published in the preceding year by a North American scholar on any aspect of British studies; the John Ben Snow Prize in History and the Social Sciences ($750), made possible by an annual grant from the Snow Foundation and given for a book in British history, politics, economics, or the history of ideas; and the Walter D. Love Memorial Prize ($150) for the best scholarly article in any field of British history. Nominations for any of these prizes may be made to the Executive Secretary of the NACBS, Professor Anthony Brundage, Department of History, California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, California 91768. Authors must be residents of Canada or the United States, but their work may appear either in North America or abroad.

Information about membership in the NACBS can be found on the copyright page of this journal.

The Making of the English Middle Class
Business, Society and Family Life in London 1660-1730
PETER EARLE
This is the first major study of a neglected yet extremely significant subject: the London middle classes in the period between 1660 and 1730, a period in which they created a society and economy that can be seen with hindsight to have ushered in the modern world.

Literary Practice and Social Change in Britain, 1380-1530
Edited by LEE PATTERSON
As a traditional site of historicist practice, medieval studies is particularly well-placed to benefit from the recent reemergence of historicism in literary studies. But this new “critical historicism” is different in both method and interests from past forms of historicist work. The differences are well illustrated by this collection.

Journal of World History

Published by University of Hawaii Press
in cooperation with the World History Association

Historical scholarship has traditionally dealt largely with the experiences of national communities. During the past quarter-century, however, historians increasingly have come to see the need to examine the effects of powerful historical forces that do not recognize national, or even cultural, boundaries—population movements, economic fluctuations, climatic changes, transfers of technology, the spread of infectious and contagious diseases, imperial expansion, long-distance trade, and the spread of religions and ideals. As a result, a substantial body of literature examining these forces has emerged.

The Journal of World History is the first journal devoted specifically to world history as a field of research and teaching. The journal publishes articles on such global themes as:

- comparative studies of developments that affect more than one civilization or cultural region
- studies in the historiography of world history
- analyses of encounters between peoples of different civilizations or cultural regions
- reflections on conceptualization and periodization in world history

The Journal of World History will appear twice a year beginning in January 1990. Individual subscriptions are regularly US$25/yr and include membership in the World History Association. Send address information and checks, payable to the World History Association, to Professor Richard Rosen, World History Association, Department of History and Politics, Drexel University, Philadelphia, PA 19104 USA, phone (215) 895-2471. VICTORIAN THINGS
Asa Briggs
Briggs presents an entertaining yet profound analysis of Victorian material culture and values, raising important theoretical issues concerning the meaning of objects, cultural anthropology, and the development of taste.

"Briggs whirls us on an exhilarating Cook's tour of the house the Victorians built: patent stoves disguised as suits of armour, Samain wear, Stephen's ink and Parker pens... But this is far more than a guidebook: it is a revelation about the making of consumer culture."—Roy Porter, The Sunday Times

THE POLITICS OF EVOLUTION
Morphology, Medicine, and Reform in Radical London
Adrian Desmond
Desmond's fascinating social history of pre-Darwinian evolutionary theories focuses on the political and scientific radicals at cut-price anatomy schools and the University of London, who found in evolution a means of attacking the natural theology of the wealthy Oxbridge gents and the privileges of the hated establishment physicians.

HAPPY SLAVES
A Critique of Consent Theory
Don Herzog
If a free individual happily chose to be a slave, would consent make slavery acceptable? This riddle begins Herzog's fascinating and unusual exploration of the strengths and weaknesses of consent theory. Using seventeenth-century British history as his touchstone, Herzog illuminates such contemporary concerns as political legitimacy, liberal neutrality, and the distinctions between law and politics.

PARLIAMENTARY HISTORY

Interest Groups and Legislation in Elizabethan Parliaments: Essays Dedicated to Sir Geoffrey Elton
Edited by Norman Jones and David Dean.

Interest Groups and Legislative Activity is an important collection of eight essays which breaks new ground in our understanding of how Elizabethans both viewed and used Parliament. For the first time the parliamentary concerns of the Earl of Leicester and of Exchequer officeholders are examined; the means used by the Privy Council, town rulers and two London companies to achieve legislative ends are investigated; and the legislation concerning treason and professional informers, both topics of much contemporary interest, are explored.

This special issue of Parliamentary History is published as a tribute to Professor Sir Geoffrey Elton's contribution to Elizabethan parliamentary history.

SPECIAL ISSUE ARTICLES INCLUDE:

The Dudley Clientele and the House of Commons, 1559-1586. Simon Adams

Exchequer Officeholders in the House of Commons, 1559-1601. J.D. Alsop

Elizabethan Towns and the 'Points of Contact': Parliament. Robert Tittler

The Treason Act of 1563: A Study of the Enforcement of Anti-Catholic Legislation. Leslie Ward

The Anonymous Diarist of 1571: Alias Thomas Atkins or Robert Bowes? Norman Jones

Sara Coleridge, A Victorian Daughter
Her Life and Essays
Bradford Keyes Mudge
Herself a talented writer, Sarah Coleridge devoted her life to editing and promoting her father’s works. This book by Bradford Keyes Mudge is at once a biography of this little-known woman, a selection of her most interesting essays, and an exploration of the constraining codes of female propriety that worked to marginalize her as a nineteenth-century woman of letters. $30.00
