David A. Messenger is an Associate Professor of history at the University of Wyoming. He is the author of L’Espagne Republicaine: French Policy and Spanish Republicanism in Liberated France (Sussex Academic Press, 2008) and is currently preparing a study of ex-Nazis in Spain after the Second World War. His work has been published in French History, International History Review, Intelligence and National Security and other journals.

Zsolt Nagy is a PhD candidate in Modern European History at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He is currently working in his dissertation on interwar East-Central European cultural diplomacy, with special emphasis on Hungary. An earlier version of this article recently won the Association of Slavic, East European, and Eurasian Studies (formerly AAASS) Graduate Student Essay Prize as well as the Graduate Student Essay Prize from the Southern Conference on Slavic Studies.

Kiran Klaus Patel held the joint chair in EU history and transatlantic relations at the European University Institute in Florence, Italy, until August 2011, and is now professor of European and global history at Maastricht University in the Netherlands. His most recent publications include: The United States and Germany during the 20th Century: Competition and Convergence (Cambridge University Press, 2010, ed. with Christof Mauch); Europeanization in the Twentieth Century: Historical Approaches (Palgrave, 2010, ed. with Martin Conway); Europäisierung wider Willen: Die Bundesrepublik Deutschland in der Agrarintegration der EWG, 1955–1973 (Oldenbourg Verlag, 2009); Fertile Ground for Europe? The History of European Integration and the Common Agricultural Policy since 1945 (Nomos, 2009, ed.).

Filipe Ribeiro de Meneses is the author of, among other works, Portugal 1914–1926: From the First World War to Military Dictatorship (University of Bristol, 2004), Salazar: A Political Biography (Enigma Books, 2009), and Afonso Costa: Portugal (Haus, 2010). He is currently investigating Portugal’s ties with South Africa and Rhodesia in the 1960s and 70s.

Johan Schot is a professor of the social history of technology at the Technical University, Eindhoven. He chairs the Tensions of Europe Collaborative Research Program and Network. His recent publications include Technology and the Making of the Netherlands: The Age of Contested Modernization, 1890–1970 (MIT Press, 2010), and Transitions to Sustainable Development: New Directions in the Study of Long Term Transformative Change (Routledge, 2010). In his current research he focuses on the role of (technical) expert networks, their technocratic visions in the policy-making of international organisations and their influence on the process of European integration and fragmentation.

Laurent Warlouzet is a lecturer at the University of Artois (Arras, France) and at Sciences Po in Paris, and specialises in the history of European integration, with a particular interest in institutional and economic issues. To date he has published three books (two co-edited volumes and a textbook; a fourth, based on his Ph.D. thesis, is in press), a dozen or so papers in French and five in English (two journal articles, two contributions to an edited volume, and a European University Institute working paper on the history of European competition policy).

Central European History offers articles, review essays, and book reviews that range widely through the history of Germany, Austria, and other German-speaking regions of Central Europe from the medieval era to the present. All topics and approaches to history are welcome, whether cultural, social, political, diplomatic, intellectual, economic, and military history, as well as historiography and methodology. Contributions that treat new fields, such as post-1945 and post-1989 history, maturing fields such as gender history, and less-represented fields such as medieval history and the history of the Habsburg lands are especially desired. The journal thus aims to be the primary venue for scholarly exchange and debate among scholars of the history of Central Europe.
International Review of Social History is one of the leading journals in its field. Truly global in its scope, it focuses on research in social and labour history from a comparative and transnational perspective, both in the modern and in the early modern period, and across periods. The journal combines quality, depth and originality of its articles with an open eye for theoretical innovation and new insights and methods from within its field and from contiguous disciplines. Besides research articles, it features surveys of new themes and subject fields, a suggestions and debates section, review essays and book reviews. It is esteemed for its annotated bibliography of social history titles, and also publishes an annual supplement of specially commissioned essays on a current theme. The 2011 special issue will examine ‘The Joy and Pain of Work: Global Attitudes and Valuations, 1500-1650’.

Journal of Global History addresses the main problems of global change over time, together with the diverse histories of globalization. It also examines counter-currents to globalization, including those that have structured other spatial units. The journal seeks to transcend the dichotomy between ‘the West and the rest’, straddle traditional regional boundaries, relate material to cultural and political history, and overcome thematic fragmentation in historiography. The journal also acts as a forum for interdisciplinary conversations across a wide variety of social and natural sciences.
