institutions are the stuff of social and economic life. The importance of understanding the role of institutions in economic growth is now widely appreciated. The Journal of Institutional Economics is devoted to the study of the nature, role and evolution of institutions in the economy, including firms, states, markets, money, households and other vital social and institutional organizations. It welcomes contributions by all schools of thought that can contribute to our understanding of the features, development and functions of real world economic institutions. ARTICLE

There must be no indication of the personal identity or institution of any author of the article within the article itself, or in the `property' of the electronic file. Normal articles, including footnotes and references, must be no larger than 9,000 words. In special cases, such as an extended review or survey article, the latter may be extended to 12,000 words. A declaration of the total word count (including footnotes and references) must accompany or be within the article. Papers with some formal content will be considered if it is fully explained for a general readership, the mathematics is consigned as much as possible to appendices, the assumptions have sufficient grounding in reality, and the paper enhances our understanding of past, present, or feasible socio-economic institutions. JOIE is not interested in the advancement of formal or econometric techniques for their own sake. The front page of the electronic file of the article should include the following information: the title; an abstract of the article of up to 120 words; the names of the authors; the names of the institutions and organizations; and an affiliations page. Submission of a paper will be held to the principle that the electronic file will be handled as much as possible to appendices, the assumptions have sufficient grounding in reality, and the paper enhances our understanding of past, present, or feasible socio-economic institutions. JOIE is not interested in the advancement of formal or econometric techniques for their own sake.
