
The Quarterly Journal of Medicine

Official Organ of the Association for Physicians of Great Britain and Ireland

One of the leading medical journals published in the U.K. (Established 1907, New Series 1932). It covers the whole field of medicine but gives some emphasis to internal medicine. Its aim is to report advances in both diagnosis and treatment, and many of its papers are concerned with the development of growing points of current interest. The basic orientation is clinical, but the journal welcomes contributions with a patho-physiological approach. In the face of the present tendency to fragment the subject, The Quarterly Journal of Medicine attempts to provide general physicians with a synoptic view. Many of the contributions provide a desirable link between clinical and basic science. In addition to original papers, the journal also publishes occasional requested review articles on subjects of special interest.

The Journal of Hygiene

The Journal of Hygiene publishes reports of research and original findings in subjects related to hygiene, preventive and social medicine. The field covered is broad and includes infection, microbiology, virology, immunity, epidemiology, food hygiene, sanitary bacteriology, statistics and the clinical and social aspects of disease.

Infection is defined in the widest sense and is concerned with the control of infectious disease in the community and within institutions and includes medical microbiology, clinical immunology, epidemiology, and the laboratory and clinical aspects of antimicrobial chemotherapy.

Papers for publication should be sent to Dr R. M. Fry, Department of Pathology, Tennis Court Road, Cambridge CB2 1QP. Papers forwarded to the Editor for publication are understood to be offered to The Journal of Hygiene alone, unless the contrary is stated.

Contributors receive twenty-five copies of their paper free. Additional copies may be purchased; these should be ordered when the final proof is returned.
