The Atlantic World
Europeans, Africans, Indians and Their Shared History, 1400 - 1900
THOMAS BENJAMIN, Central Michigan University

Praise for The Atlantic World

“...a welcome addition to the growing scholarship on the history of the Atlantic World. Benjamin’s narrative, supplemented by the voices of contemporary Atlantic World inhabitants, deftly illustrates the complex connections that have historically joined people and places around the Atlantic Basin. The text’s chronological and geographic breadth make it an ideal resource for scholars and students alike.”
– Dr. Rebecca Hartkopf Schloss, Texas A & M University

“Both erudite and accessible, The Atlantic World is the perfect textbook for courses on the interaction between Europeans, Africans, and Native Americans in the early modern period. Professor Benjamin has achieved just the right tone, length, and detailed coverage, without losing sight of the larger picture. His years of reading widely on myriad topics has paid off handsomely, to the benefit of instructors and students alike.”
– Matthew Restall, Pennsylvania State University

Features

Cohesively written and feature rich
This is a single-author book written by someone who teaches a course on Atlantic History. It is an all-purpose text upon which the course can be built. It also provides pedagogical features such as excerpts from primary documents and further reading lists.

Geographic Balance
Rather than privilege one aspect of the Atlantic World to the exclusion of others – the British Atlantic, Native Peoples, the Spanish Empire, the slave trade in Africa – it balances each group and area in turn.

Up to date and accessible
Benjamin introduces recent scholarship, case studies, and historiographic debates, emphasizing history as an interpretive discipline. Despite this, the text is lightly footnoted, and each chapter has a bibliography for further reading.

Editorial Policy

The Journal of Global History seeks scholarly articles that explore global change. Concerns of particular interest are: (1) areas, themes, and topics that the journal particularly welcomes contributions from, Asia, Africa, and Latin America. The editors address unsolicited submissions from both well-established and new and younger scholars working to create detailed research in a wider context. They carefully avoid publishing survey articles, data-rich pieces and selected book reviews. The editorial philosophy is to encourage original and diverse contributions by authors throughout the world. Regular reviews, however, are normally reserved for volumes or collections of essays that have substantial merit. Reviews of books. The journal only publishes reviews that cover the address problems of global history. Book reviews are limited to the text of the journal and only those books that the reviewer believes are of interest to global historians. They are sent to the UK address indicated below.
