Project 87 Second Competition for Research Grants and Residential Fellowships

Project 87, the examination of the United States Constitutional Systems, jointly sponsored by the American Political Science Association and the American Historical Association project has announced a second competition for research grants and residential fellowships.

Historians and political scientists, as well as students of philosophy and the law and practitioners of other social sciences, are invited to apply for support of research that focuses on one or more of the following four areas: critical analyses of the political theory of the American constitutional tradition; investigations of particular turning points or threads in constitutional evolution; examinations of political behavior as conditioned by constitutional forms and rules; and inquiries into the reputation and impact of the Constitution and the American constitutional system as a model for other nations.

Conditions of Grant Awards

The application deadline for the current grant competition is November 1, 1978. The period of the grant can begin as early as March 1, 1979. The starting date and duration of the grant will be negotiable and applicants are invited to state their preferences. In order to spread its resources as far as possible, Project 87 will not include institutional overhead as a part of its grants, except on a direct cost basis for services rendered to a grantee. Grant money will not be available to support publications. Support will not normally be provided for doctoral dissertations.

Categories of Grant Awards

I. Grants in Aid of Research for amounts less than $5,000. Grants in this category are designed to support on-site research for scholars at their home institutions or at libraries or centers of research throughout the country. Such costs as research and secretarial assistance, photocopying and travel apply to these grants.

II. Grants in Aid of Research for amounts greater than $5,000. Grants in this category are designed to enable grantees to take leave of other responsibilities for periods of three summer months, a semester, or (in rare instances) a full year in order to conduct research at their home institutions or at libraries or centers of research throughout the country. Such costs as research and secretarial assistance, photocopying and travel apply to these grants.

Conditions of Fellowship Awards

The Fellowships in Residence Program will enable qualified scholars to devote full-time consideration to constitutional studies for a stated period (normally ranging from three months to a year) at the Project 87 central offices at the Brookings Institution in Washington, D.C. Applications for Fellows are due November 1, 1978 and may begin as early as January 1, 1979. Applicants are invited to state their preferences as to starting time and duration of the fellowship. Compensation will normally be arranged, pro-rate, to match the Fellow's salary and benefits for the year preceding the fellowship.

Applicants interested in applying for a Grant or Fellowship Award should read carefully the instructions for applicants listed below.

Instructions for Applicants for Research Grants and Fellows

In weighing the applications for support from Project 87 the Screening Committee will be guided by the following general considerations:

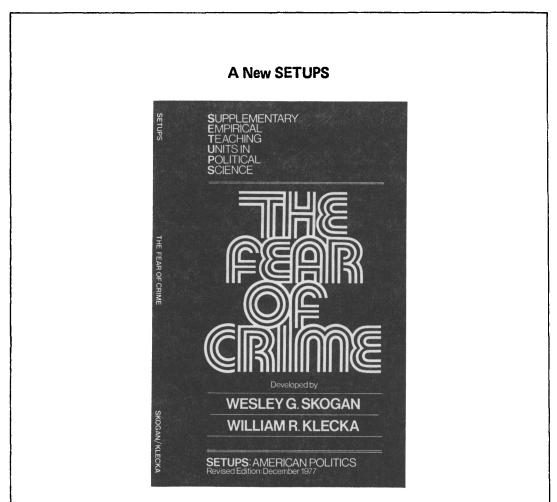

- The centrality of the constitutional system to the proposed research. The limited resources of Project 87 will be devoted to inquiries that focus directly on the constitutional system, its origins, development, current condition, reputation, impact, or future implications. Studies may of course be critica!, and they may be broad-based, taking into account the cultural, social, economic, technological and international environment of the changing constitution. But for Project 87, the crucial factor will be the premise that proposed studies will make a substantial contribution to our knowledge of the constitutional system.
- 2) Project 87 is eager to encourage work on the constitutional system by young scholars as well as established ones. Proposals will be considered in light of the demonstrated capacity of the applicant, or on the basis of promise, as attested by persons whose judgment and objectivity can be relied upon.
- 3) Proposals for study will be welcomed from any qualified person. Applicants will not be limited to those who are members of academic faculties, nor those who are members of the American Political Science Association or the American Historical Association.

In the application, the following information should be clearly and succinctly set forth in a format normally not to exceed ten pages:

- 1) Which type of award (grant or fellowship in residence) is sought.
- The nature and significance of the research proposed to be undertaken during the period of the award.
- 3) The research model to be followed, with an indication of progress on the project to date (if any).
- 4) Plans for dissemination (publication or otherwise) upon completion of the research.
- 5) The applicant's background for the work proposed. Each applicant should also enclose a full resume.
- 6) Proposed starting date and duration of the award (including alternatives, if the applicant can be flexible).
- 7) Applicants in both categories of award must provide a realistic budget estimate of all anticipated research expenses. Fellowship applicants should indicate the salary and benefits which will have to be matched for the period of residence.
- 8) In addition to the application itself, each candidate for either category of award must arrange to have two letters of evaluation submitted directly to Project 87 containing an assessment of the feasibility and significance of the proposed study as outlined in the application, and commenting on the ability of the applicant to complete the work. All material should be mailed to: Project 87, 1775 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

For Courses in Criminal Justice, Political Sociology and Political Behavior

Using victimization survey data collected by the U.S. Bureau of the Census, the module raises several important methodological questions whose resolution will help students more fully understand the potential and limitations of sample surveys.

POLITICAL SCIENCE THESAURUS

compiled by Carl Beck, Eleanor D. Dym, J. Thomas McKechnie

published by the American Political Science Association produced by the University Center for International Studies, University of Pittsburgh

The Political Science Thesaurus was created to provide a "terminologyregulating" device for a computer-based information storage and retrieval system being designed at the University Center for International Studies, University of Pittsburgh, in conjunction with the American Political Science Association. This information system is now in published form and known as United States Political Science Documents.

The Political Science Thesaurus comprises, in addition to a foreword and a preface, a Description and Use of the Thesaurus section, the Thesaurus of Terms, a Permuted Index, a Hierarchical Index, and three Appendices-Thesaurus Rules and Conventions, Sources of Terms Used in the Data Bank, and a list of Participants in the production and creation of the Thesaurus. The main body of the publication-the Thesaurus of Terms-consists of Part I: Political Science Terminology and Part II: Geographical/Political Areas.

The Political Science Thesaurus is available in both casebound and paperback editions of 470 pages. The paperback is $15.00 to individuals and $25.00 to institutions. Orders should be sent to the American Political Science Association, 1527 New Hampshire Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. Checks should be made payable to the American Political Science Association, and APSA members should deduct 20% from the total.
