SMR/Sociological Methods & Research

*Editor: J. Scott Long,
Indiana University*

Devoted to the advancement of social and behavioral science methodology, SMR/Sociological Methods & Research emphasizes articles that clarify methodological problems, or that assist in organizing the known facts in a particular discipline or research area.

Empirically-based, SMR/Sociological Methods & Research strives to assess the validity, effectiveness and theoretical significance of the empirical research methods used in social science methodology. Though its articles are highly focused, the journal addresses a wide range of subject areas: sociology, psychology, political science, economics, anthropology, education research are just a few.

Featuring articles on such topics as:

- Simultaneous Latent Structure Analysis
- Principal Components Analysis
- Organizational Behavior Research
- Regression Analysis

PROTECTING PRIVACY IN SURVEILLANCE SOCIETIES

The Federal Republic of Germany, Sweden, France, Canada, and the United States
by David H. Flaherty

In this first work on privacy and data protection from a cross-national perspective, David Flaherty establishes the topic as a field of scholarly inquiry in terms of public policy, law, and public administration. Drawing from research derived primarily from interviews, Flaherty offers a comparative and critical analysis of what data protectors are actually doing to preserve individual rights and what problems they are encountering. "I enthusiastically recommend the book to legislators, policymakers, scholars, and concerned citizens throughout the world."—U.S. Congressman Glenn English, former chairman of the Government Information, Justice, and Agriculture Subcommittee
