The Oriental, the Ancient and the Primitive

Systems of Marriage and the Family in the Pre-industrial Societies of Eurasia

Jack Goody

Professor Goody looks in depth at kinship practice in Asia, questioning many traditional assumptions about the "primitive" east, and suggesting that, in contrast to pre-colonial Africa, kinship practice in Asia has much in common with that prevailing in parts of pre-industrial Europe.

The Rise and Fall of the Plantation Complex

Essays in Atlantic History

Philip D. Curtin

Over a period of several centuries, Europeans overseas developed an intricate system of plantation agriculture that was different from the agricultural institutions they normally used at home. Though the plantation complex centered on the American tropics, its influence was widespread. These essays concentrate on the intercontinental perspective over more than a half-millennium from its first appearance to its fall at the end of the nineteenth century.

Culture and Agency

The Place of Culture in Social Theory

Margaret S. Archer

Margaret Archer provides an analysis of the nature and stringency of cultural constraints and the conditions and degrees of cultural freedom. She offers a radical new explanation of the tension between them and suggests that the "problem of culture and agency" directly parallels the "problem of structure and agency," and that both problems can be solved by using the same analytical framework.

The Heart of the Commonwealth Society and Political Culture in Worcester County, Massachusetts, 1713-1861

John L. Brooke

This book interprets the impact of national and industrial revolution on the social and cultural fabric of one Massachusetts county. Exploring the role of republican and liberal ideologies in recurring cycles of political consensus and insurgency over the century and a half before the Civil War, it presents a model for understanding the social construction of public culture in early America.

Socio-Religious Movements in British India

Kenneth W. Jones

This volume looks at the numerous nineteenth-century movements for social and religious change—Christian, Hindu, Muslim, Sikh, and Zoroastrian—that used various forms of religious authority to legitimize their reform programs. Such movements were both indigenous and colonial in their origins, and the author shows how each adapted to the challenge of competing nationalisms as political circumstances changed.

NEW PERSPECTIVES ON HISTORY

A Usable Past

Essays in European Cultural History

WILLIAM J. BOUWSMA

New in cloth and paperback—"Together the articles form a substantial book which traces the antecedents, characteristics and impact of Renaissance thought and action 'beyond all schools,' with that combination of scholarly precision and personal style which has made Bouwsma one of the most highly respected historians on this continent."

Rioters and Citizens

Mass Protest in Imperial Japan

MICHAEL LEWIS

"An influential contribution to what is now the liveliest area of modern Japanese history—labor and social history of the early twentieth century. Given Lewis's ability to contextualize each area of dispute and to detail the diverse organizations, strategies, and courses of actions, he gives us an appreciation of the richness and diversity that is lacking in previous accounts."—William Kelly, Yale University

Agrarian Capitalism in Theory and Practice

by Susan Archer Mann

“Deserves close examination by sociologists, economists, and historians struggling to understand the dynamics of uneven development and the persistence of non-wage production systems.”—Robert J. Thomas

Emphasizing the agriculture of the American South, Susan Mann offers a pioneering theory to explain why agriculture has been traditionally resistant to wage labor. 228 pp., 10 figures, 22 tables, $29.95

Ecological Revolutions

Nature, Gender, and Science in New England

by Carolyn Merchant

“Drawing on the insights of historians of science, Marxists, anthropologists, ecologists, feminists, and others, Merchant has systematically revealed the underlying structure of large-scale environmental transformations such as occurred in New England from 1600 to 1860. . . . One of the most provocative books to appear in the field of environmental history.”

Comparative Studies in Society and History is a forum for presentation and discussion of new research into problems of change and stability that recur in human societies through time or in the contemporary world. It sets up a working alliance between specialists in all branches of the social sciences and humanities. Debate and review articles bring the general reader in touch with current findings and issues.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

Contributions may be descriptive, analytical, or theoretical. Any article not in itself comparative may be accepted if it lends itself to comment that will place it in comparative perspective. Correspondence with the editors prior to the submission of articles will help to enable them to obtain such comment or a companion study. Emphasis in comparative studies may be either on similarities or, if these are significant enough and call for some recasting of generalizations, on differences. All contributions and editorial correspondence should be sent to the Editors, Comparative Studies in Society and History, 102 Rackham Building, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48109-1070.

Two copies of each contribution, preferably accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope, should be submitted. Both text and footnotes should be clearly typed with double spacing and wide margins; footnotes should appear on separate pages at the end of the article. Illustrations may be included by arrangement with the editors.
