| leader | 299 | Situated knowledges in architecture |
| report | 300 | Genres of 'Architectural Theory Now?' Ali AlYousefi |
| | 305 | Theory and histories Jane McAllister |
| design | 310 | Bang Bang House and Measure House: poetic and performative architectures of softness Matthew Butcher explores an architecture of softness to counteract increasing conditions of disembodied and disenchantment from our experience and understanding of the material and physical world. |
| history | 331 | Settings for collective renewal: Alison and Peter Smithson's Christmas exhibitions Ana Ábalos-Ramos examines a series of four Christmas-themed exhibitions developed by the Smithsons over 1976–81, that offered an opportunity to explore a renewed 'art of inhabitation'. |
| | 349 | From earth to heaven: the origin and development of zaojing in early China Jing Xie explores how zaojing or lantern ceilings, formally derived from water wells, were seen both as social signifiers of rank and 'magical' fire protection devices. |
| education | 365 | Making sites that matter: choreographing situated knowing in architectural analysis and design Oren Lieberman draws on situated knowledges, agential realism, and matters of concern and care to develop the notion of situatedness , as opposed to context, for architectural education and practice. |

Innovative in conception, unique in breadth and generously illustrated, this pace-setting quarterly publication from Cambridge University Press bridges, on a global scale, the realms of architectural practice and research. arq includes extensive peer-reviewed sections on design, history, theory, digital, environmental design, education, and practice – as well as landscape, materials and urbanism. These are supplemented with reports, reviews and perspectives. Each issue opens with a leader and usually closes with insight, or a letter from a place of interest. In its history, arq has published work from all over the world: from Chile to The Netherlands and from Japan to South Africa – with a strong representation from the United Kingdom, United States, China and Australia. arq, like architecture itself, is all-embracing and written by and for both academics and practitioners.
