Accelerated Development in Sub-Saharan Africa

An Agenda for Action

This report has been prepared by the staff of the World Bank. It highlights the severity and complexity of the problems facing many of the countries of Sub-Saharan Africa in their efforts to raise the living standards of their people.

The central theme of the report is that more efficient use of scarce resources – human and capital, managerial and technical, domestic and foreign – is essential for improving economic conditions in most African countries. From this flow a number of suggestions for the improvement of incentives and institutional support for production, particularly in agriculture.

The report offers no general prescriptions, but aims to encourage the reviews and discussions which are prerequisite to the formulation of the programmes of action which must be formulated by each country.

The Journal of African History

The Journal publishes articles and reviews ranging widely over the African past from the Late Stone Age to the present. Since its establishment in 1960, it has aimed to reflect all the central interests of historians of Africa, and has included contributions from specialists in a variety of disciplines, including archaeology, botany and comparative philology.

Recent issues have devoted increasing space to economic history and to the colonial period. The journal seeks to present the results of new research in the broader context of historical change whether on a regional or continental scale.

Hausaland (Nigeria) and Karnataka (India) Compared

POLLY HILL

The prevailing orthodoxy in development studies maintains that cultivators in any particular community are likely to have similar economic responses, and that all rural poverty in tropical regions has similar causes and can be alleviated by similar means. Dr Hill's fieldwork leads her to challenge these views, and to point to the need for a proper categorisation of the main types of agrarian system in the tropical world.

Slavery, Colonisation and Economic Growth in Dahomey, 1640-1960

PATRICK MANNING

The small but important region of Dahomey (now the People's Republic of Bénin) has played an active role in the world economy for virtually the whole era of mercantile and industrial capitalism. This book successfully integrates into a single framework the pre-colonial, colonial, and post-colonial economic history.

Production, Labour, Migrancy and Chiefs in Rural South Africa

WILLIAM BEINART

This book examines in detail how the people of one formerly independent African chiefdom were absorbed into the wider South African society during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. New documentary evidence and oral material collected by the author lead him to question some assumptions on 'underdevelopment' in Africa.

The Case of Sayyid Mahammad 'Abdille Hasan

SAID S. SAMATAR

By reconstructing the history of the Somali nationalist resistance movement in the early years of the twentieth century, Professor Samatar explores the use of oral poetry in a non-literate society, both as a means of communication and as a political weapon. This book provides a fascinating account of the 'Mad Mullah's' poetry, and of the way he used it to pursue his political ends.

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the business man, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.
