

The Mind of the Qur'ān

KENNETH CRAGG

Book and people have never been so surely joined as in Islam. The sense of final Scripture in possession has made the Muslim what he is for almost fourteen centuries of interpretation and acceptance. This book therefore inquires "How has the book been received by Islam?". It offers a deep and sympathetic study of the meaning of the Qur'ān in the life of Muslims. As a sequel to the author's The Event of the Qur'ān (1971), it is concerned with the main thrust of original Islam, its traditions and its role in today's dialogue of religion and secular man.

Libellus de Diversis Ordinibus

et Professionibus qui sunt in Aecclesia

Edited and translated by G. Constable and B. Smith

The Libellus de diversis ordinibus should be of interest to students of medieval intellectual history and of medieval religious movements and spirituality. It was written in the thirties or forties of the twelfth century, probably in the diocese of Liège, and is a description of the similarities and differences among the various orders of monks, canons, and hermits of the time. Frontispiece £3·50

Gnosis: A Selection of Gnostic Texts

Volume I: Patristic Evidence

Edited by Werner FoersterEnglish translation edited by R. McL. Wilson

The present work provides a comprehensive selection of patristic texts for the study of Gnosticism, introduced and annotated by distinguished German scholars. A second volume will include extracts from the Nag Hammadi library and from Mandaean literature. £6

A Catalogue of Manuscripts in Lambeth Palace Library

MSS. 1222–1860

Compiled by E. G. W. Bill

In addition to many medieval manuscripts, this catalogue covers the church history of the last 400 years in England and Scotland, and includes important papers on America, Australia, South Africa, and Asia. There is also a considerable amount of political material, and papers about architecture, education, and local history. £12·50

The Figurae of Joachim of Fiore*Marjorie Reeves and Beatrice Hirsch-Reich*

The figurae of Joachim of Fiore are in many ways a unique expression of the medieval imagination, the work of an artist and mystic who endeavoured to express the mysteries of the Trinity and the patterns of history in rich and strange visual forms. This book attempts to trace this evolution and to unravel the complexities of their interpretation. 25 plates 10 text figures £10 Oxford Warburg Studies

English Roman Catholics and Higher Education 1830–1903

Vincent Alan McClelland

The effort to come to terms with the larger society within which Roman Catholics had to function is the main theme of this study. The problem can be seen in microcosm in the fight for higher education and in the internal tensions and turmoil to which it gave rise. £7

Religion and Soviet Foreign Policy 1945–1970

William C. Fletcher

This book evaluates the role that religious individuals and organizations have played in Soviet foreign affairs. The discussion encompasses the major religions and international religious bodies, and the study shows that religion, while never a dominant concern of Soviet foreign policy, has played and continues to play an increasingly pervasive role. £3.50 Royal Institute of International Affairs

Church and State in Ethiopia 1270–1527

Taddesse Tamrat

This book reconstructs the history of Christian Ethiopia during the period when the state suddenly grew into an extensive empire, bringing under its control many pagan Falashe and Muslim peoples. From the rich historical records of medieval Ethiopia the author has been able to fill many gaps and to cover the history of the whole period as part of a single dynamic trend of development. Frontispiece £5.50 Oxford Studies in African Affairs

The Orthodox Churches and the Secular State

The Sir Douglas Robb Lectures 1970

Steven Runciman

Sir Steven Runciman surveys in these lectures the relationship of Church and rulers in the Byzantine Empire, Tsarist Russia, the Ottoman Empire, and their successor states, as a means of understanding how they face their problems today. £2 Auckland University Press

God the Problem

Gordon D. Kaufman

Mr Kaufman explores the question of why God is a problem for many moderns, the dimensions of that problem, and the inner logic of the notion of God as it has developed in Western culture. £5 Harvard University Press
