WHAT A WAY TO LIGHT A SHOW!

HOW THE LIGHTING SYSTEM AT THE NEW SANTA FE OPERA MEETS THE DEMANDING REQUIREMENTS OF A PROFESSIONAL REPERTORY THEATRE

For the truly creative director, the major limitation in lighting a show has always been the equipment. It wasn't that there weren't enough lighting instruments or control in the theatre . . . it was that they couldn't do enough fast enough.

But the Kliegl Bros. lighting system in the new Santa Fe Opera House has changed all that.

A total of 313 stage lighting circuits are connected at Kliegl's unique SAFPATCH cross-connect panel to the outputs of 100 SCR Dimmers.[®] The dimmers incorporate an automatic current sensing network, preventing equipment damage from accidental overloads.

The control system allows five scenes to be preset — and four sub-masters to control lighting changes within each of the five scenes. Two independent group masters, a split fader, "pile-on" capability, non-dim switching, and a complete set of manual dimmer controls further extend the designer's control capabilities.

Lighting instruments in the new theatre all use the long life tungsten halogen lamps. The designer has at his command 20 motorized four-color changer circuits, which can be preset for five programmed changes by the control operator.

Kliegl Bros. is preparing a booklet describing the Santa Fe Opera system more fully than is possible in this space. Please write or call Kliegl Bros. (Att: Dr. Joel Rubin, Vice-Pres.) for your free advance copy.

MYTH AND MODERN AMERICAN DRAMA

By Thomas E. Porter

Most American dramatic criticism deals with character analysis based on the personal whim of the critic. This book, in contrast, establishes a critical common ground on which particular plays can be discussed objectively.

Father Porter recommends a course suggested by the Cambridge Anthropologists, relating drama to the cultural milieu in which it is produced. Thus, American drama reflects American culture in plot, character and setting, and the meaning of the play is established by its relationship to the cultural milieu.

On the basis of his thorough groundwork, Father Porter has selected nine American plays for analysis. Some—O'Neill's Mourning Becomes Electra, Eliot's Cocktail Party, and MacLeish's J. B.—draw on traditional or conventional literary and dramatic sources which are molded into a new dramatic shape by their fusion with American attitudes. Others—Kingsley's Detective Story, Miller's Death of a Salesman and The Crucible, Williams' A Streetcar Named Desire, Wilder's Our Town, and Albee's Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?—use popular sub-literary genres or contemporary institutions to forge new patterns of dramatic action.

Thomas E. Porter is a Jesuit priest and assistant professor of English at the University of Detroit.

THE MAJOR COMEDIES OF ALEXANDER FREDRO

TRANSLATED, WITH AN INTRODUCTION AND
COMMENTARIES, BY HAROLD B. SEGEL

Alexander Fredro (1793-1876) is regarded as Poland's greatest comic dramatist and continues to remain a favorite with Polish audiences. This book provides English translations of five of Fredro's major comedies, two of which—Husband and Wife and The Life Annuity—appear for the first time in English. Professor Segel places Fredro in the history of Polish and European drama by comparing his comedies with those of Molière and Goldoni. The author also traces the development of Polish comedy from its early beginnings in the second half of the sixteenth century to its culmination in Fredro's masterpieces. In separate introductory comments, Professor Segel outlines the plot and analyzes various stylistic devices used by Fredro.

SOCIAL SCIENCE AND MODERN SOCIETY

There is only one magazine in this country that issue after issue publishes the research & insights of sociologists, psychologists, political scientists, economists, & anthropologists into the important events & major issues of our time.

That magazine is Trans-action the national magazine of the social sciences.

Trans-action is an exciting new combination—a scholarly journal and a general-interest magazine.

Like a scholarly journal, its authors are academicians (like Robert Coles, Kenneth Keniston, David Riesman, Howard Becker, Oscar Lewis, Robert Jay Lifton, and Herbert Gans).

Like a general-interest magazine, its articles are chosen for their importance and wide appeal, then edited for clarity, and illustrated with artwork from leading photographers & artists.

In Trans-action you can read original articles, with all the supporting evidence & absorbing details that intelligent readers want—articles that are as clear & as lively as those in mass-circulation magazines.

If you don't want to spend next year missing articles like those listed below why not subscribe right now?

Commentary may be over your head.

Commentary is not a mass magazine. In ten years our circulation has quadrupled. Yet today, we could still squeeze all our subscribers into Yankee Stadium. But what an extraordinary gathering it would be, including the most informed, articulate, influential and accomplished people in the English-speaking world.

They would be a varied group, ranging politically from Dwight Macdonald (who says that "Commentary is, for 'keeping up,' much the best of the monthlies and quarterlies, in fact the best for any purposes"), to Clare Booth Luce (who calls Commentary the only literate magazine published in America).

An impressive delegation from Washington would be there too—ranging from occupants of the White House to some of their most severe critics on Capitol Hill.

Commentary, as the name implies, is a magazine of opinion concerned with everything of interest to people of intelligence, taste, and curiosity. Its aim is to clarify issues, analyze problems, encourage original thinking, and spark honest debate.

Obviously, to earn the high regard of so many highly regarded people it must also aim for excellence. It had better be challenging, literate, and unafraid of controversy. Commentary is. It must avoid platitudes, pat answers, and easy solutions. Commentary does. Its contributors must be among the most lucid and pertinent experts anywhere. They are.

In any issue you might find Michael Harrington, Daniel P. Moynihan, or Bayard Rustin exploring serious problems of the moment.

Or contemporary historians Theodore Draper, and George Lichtheim going below the surface of urgent questions and setting them in an illuminating long-range perspective.

Or such penetrating literary critics as Edmund Wilson, Lionel Trilling, and Leslie A. Fiedler. Jack Richardson, one of America's foremost younger playwrights, reviews the theater for us. America's most important fiction writers appear in our pages: Saul Bellow, Bernard Malamud, Philip Roth, and James Baldwin among them.

Commentary is probably the only magazine in the world that has sparked the formation of discussion groups. Over one hundred of them meet each month to discuss and argue the contents of our magazine.

Commentary was initiated two decades ago by the American Jewish Committee to make a significant contribution to serious publishing in America. It is still published by the Committee. But, now as then, it does not serve any parochial interest. Commentary was ecumenical long before Vatican II, and remains, as The New York Times describes it, "an exciting and important forum for coherent ideas about the whole American culture. . . ."

It should be apparent to you that Commentary is not a magazine for everyone. It requires intelligence, and the willingness to use all you have. But because Commentary is unique, we are making an unusual introductory offer.

A year's subscription, 12 monthly issues, costs $9. ($12 at the newsstands). A 7-month subscription costs $5.50. However, if you think you would like to join the select circle of Commentary readers, we'll send you your first copy free.

If the first issue is everything we say it is and you want to continue getting it, do nothing. We'll start your subscription with the second issue you receive. If you decide Commentary is too much for you after reading the first issue, tell us. We'll refund your money in full.

You have nothing to lose and a great magazine to gain.

But it won't cost a thing to find out.
