Correspondence should be sent to: Amit Malik MRCPsych, Consultant Psychiatrist, Hampshire Partnership NHS Trust, UK, email ip@rcpsych.ac.uk

Competency-based training elsewhere in Europe

The overall emphasis in postgraduate psychiatric training in Western Europe is shifting towards a competency-based model. Other countries, including Sweden and Denmark, are also developing their systems of training and assessment. Close collaboration between the various national systems will enhance the quality and validity of all the new competency-based models. This should be promoted not only bilaterally but also multilaterally, through international organisations such as Union Européenne des Médecins Spécialistes (UEMS) and the European Federation for all Psychiatric Trainees (EFPT). Both these organisations are already actively discussing competency-based training.

Conclusion

Competency-based training, once properly implemented, will allow a doctor’s performance in the workplace to be reliably assessed. As this new model of training is implemented, the assessment tools need to be carefully evaluated and improved. It is hoped that competency-based training will lead to enhanced standards in postgraduate medical education, resulting in better training for trainees and better care for patients. The experiences of trainees in the Netherlands and the UK will be useful for trainees in other parts of Europe as competency-based training is implemented there.

References

General Medical Council (2001) Good Medical Practice (3rd edition). GMC.

Reduced membership rates

The Royal College of Psychiatrists has reduced its annual subscription rates to £30 for members working in countries classed as B and C or D according to the World Bank criteria if their monthly income in 2008 is below £1000. Further details are available from the College Membership Office.

Bursary for psychiatrists from low-income countries

The College’s Faculty of the Psychiatry of Old Age has a bursary for psychiatrists practising in low-income countries in the field of mental health in older people, to attend the annual residential meeting in Barcelona on 5–6 March 2009. Further information is available from kkottasz@rcpsych.ac.uk.

Specialist Associateship

In July 2008 the College launched a new grade of membership, Specialist Associateship, open to registered specialists who qualified abroad but who currently work in the UK. Further information is available from latkinson@rcpsych.ac.uk.

The launch of BACAMH

The Bangladesh Association for Child and Adolescent Mental Health (BACAMH) was launched in May 2008. Its mission is to promote the mental health of children, adolescents and their families through training, research, prevention and collaboration. See the Association’s website, http://www.bacamh.99homepages.com.

A visit to Iraqi Kurdistan

Sir: The Iraq Subcommittee (ISC) of the Board of International Affairs organised a visit to Iraqi Kurdistan to help support mental health services within the province. Four members of the Subcommittee took part in the visit, on 8–15 June 2007. Our official meetings started on the day of our arrival. We met with the dean of Hawler Medical School, the president of Hawler Medical University and the dean of Hawler Nursing School, as well as the Minister of Health and the Minister of Higher Education (Hawler is the Kurdish name for Erbil, capital of the province). We also visited the mental health unit in Hawler Hospital and met with the consultants, psychiatric trainees and other staff. We also visited a newly commissioned long-stay psychiatric facility.
International Psychiatry
Volume 5 Number 3
July 2008

Section Editor
John Henderson

Administrative support
Joanna Carroll

Editorial board
John Henderson
Rachel Jenkins
Nasser Loza
Amit Malik
R. N. Mohan
Shekhar Saxena

Subscriptions
International Psychiatry is published four times a year.
For subscriptions non-members of the College should contact:
Publications Subscriptions Department, Maney Publishing, Suite 1C, Joseph’s Well, Hanover Walk, Leeds LS1 1AB, UK tel: +44 (0)113 243 2802, fax: +44 (0)113 386 8178, email: subscriptions@maney.co.uk
For subscriptions in North America please contact:
Maney Publishing North America, 875 Massachusetts Avenue, 7th Floor, Cambridge, MA 02139, USA tel: +1 617 515 7614 (toll free); fax: +1 617 374 6875; email: maney@maneyusa.com
Annual subscription rates for 2008 (four issues, post free) are £26.00 (US$47.00). Single issues are £8.00 (US$14.40), post free.

Design © The Royal College of Psychiatrists 2008.

Copyright enquiries, please contact The Head of Publications, Royal College of Psychiatrists.

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced or utilised in any form or by any electronic, mechanical or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, without permission in writing from the publisher.

The views presented in this publication do not necessarily reflect those of the Royal College of Psychiatrists, and the publishers are not responsible for any error of omission or fact.
The Royal College of Psychiatrists is a charity registered in England and Wales (1228636) and in Scotland (SC038369).

International Psychiatry was originally published as (and sub-titled) the Bulletin of the Board of International Affairs of the Royal College of Psychiatrists.
Printed in the UK by Henry Ling Limited at the Dorset Press, Dorchester DT1 1HD.

US mailing information
International Psychiatry is published quarterly in January, April, July, and October by the Royal College of Psychiatrists.
Subscription price is $47. Postage per address paid at Rahway, NJ, US agent: Mercury International, 365 Blair Road, Avenue, Nj 07001. POSTMASTER: address changes to International Psychiatry, c/o Mercury International, 365 Blair Road, Avenue, Nj 07001.

Notice to contributors
International Psychiatry publishes original and scientific articles, country profiles and points of view, dealing with the policy and promotion of mental health, the administration and management of mental health services, and training in psychiatry around the world. Correspondence as well as items for the notes and news column will also be considered for publication.
Manuscripts for publication must be submitted electronically to the Editor (hgyhodai@iqmhs.org), with a copy sent to the Secretariat (ip@rcpsych.ac.uk). The maximum length for papers is 1500 words; correspondence should not be longer than 500 words. The Harvard system of referencing should be used.
A declaration of interest must be given and should list fees and grants from, employment by, consultancy for, shared ownership in, or any close relationship with, any organisation whose interests, financial or otherwise, may be affected by the publication of your submission. This pertains to all the authors.
Manuscripts accepted for publication are copy-edited to improve readability and to ensure conformity with house style. Contributions are accepted for publication on the condition that their substance has not been published or submitted elsewhere.

About our peer-review process
All articles submitted as ‘special papers’ will be peer-reviewed to ensure that their content, length and structure are appropriate for the journal. Although not all papers will be accepted for publication, our peer-review process is intended to assist our authors in producing articles for worldwide dissemination. Whenever possible, our expert panel of assessors will help authors to improve their manuscripts to maximise their impact when published.

Mission of International Psychiatry
The journal is intended primarily as a platform for authors from low- and middle-income countries, sometimes writing in partnership with colleagues elsewhere. Submissions from authors from developing countries and other divisions of the Royal College of Psychiatrists are particularly encouraged.

After this we travelled to Sulaymanya (the second largest city in Iraqi Kurdistan), where we met with the president of the university, the deputy dean of the medical school, the dean of the nursing school and the governor of the province. We also visited a primary care centre and a centre for the Heartland Foundation (an international non-governmental organisation).

Despite the shortage of material resources, the limited infrastructure, a shortage of staff of every discipline and an almost complete lack of community mental health services, we saw examples of innovative practice. For example, we noted the use of both radio and television as an aid to mental health education and an effective means of raising community awareness of mental health issues in general. However, there was clearly a continuing sense of professional isolation from the rest of the world.

There was very strong support from all levels of the Kurdistan Regional Government (KRG), from the top executives right through to the mental health professionals on the ground, for the establishment of a formal link between the College volunteer programme and the health and higher education ministries within the KRG. They undertook to provide every assistance to any volunteers arriving through the College. Furthermore, most of the officials we met showed an acute appreciation of the value of mental health services for the population of Iraqi Kurdistan and for Iraq as a whole, especially given the traumatic recent history. The areas identified as priorities for future volunteers to Iraqi Kurdistan included curriculum reviews for medical schools; advice on mental health service structure; as well as teaching, training and examining of undergraduate and postgraduate students.

The security situation within Iraqi Kurdistan was surprisingly low, with perhaps 15 hours of that night without any guards or precautions and never once in the least threatened.

Finally, we took a trip in an Iraqi-wide event for continuing medical education (CME) on mental health that took place over 2 days in Hawler and where we, together with a US colleague, were the main speakers. About 65 participants attended this event, mainly from the three KRG governorates but also from the rest of Iraq, which made up the largest mental health educational event ever held within Iraqi Kurdistan.

The ISC delegation achieved its aim of establishing a formal link between the College volunteer scheme and the KRG. This has been formalised by the signing of a memorandum of understanding between the College and the KRG at the College headquarters in London on 6 December 2007. Also, we are gratified to learn of the formation of a High Committee for Mental Health in Iraqi Kurdistan following the visit tasked with the planning and oversight of these services in the area covered by the KRG. The next stage will see the ISC of the College to ensure that this link is activated and kept alive through the encouragement of volunteers to travel to Iraqi Kurdistan and to offer their expertise to mental health colleagues within that country.

Riadh Abed1, Majid Alyassini2, Mohammed Al-Uziwi1 and Rizkar Amin3

1Medical Director, Rotherham, Doncaster and South Humber Mental Health Foundation Trust; 2Consultant Psychiatrist and Honorary Senior Lecturer; 3Consultant Psychiatrist, Leicester General Hospital, Leicester LE5 4PW, UK; 4Consultant Psychiatrist, Park Royal Centre for Mental Health, London, UK

Global challenges facing psychiatric training

Sir: At the annual meeting of the Royal College in July, British trainees were treated to a taste of the trainee’s lot in France, the Czech Republic and the USA. It was reassuring to hear that UK training often compares favourably with that overseas.

Oliver Anjoulet, a delegate from France, reported that the French have a laissez-faire approach to postgraduate training. Interestingly, according to statistics, this manages to produce the greatest patient satisfaction in Europe! There are no formal postgraduate assessments or examinations, and training can vary enormously across France, largely according to the enthusiasm of the trainers. It is up to trainees to make the most of their attachments, and the very enterprising have even initiated local teaching programmes, using generally lasts 4 years, at the end of which trainees can call themselves psychotherapists’ as well as ‘psychiatrists’, even with no formal psychotherapy training.

The next speaker was Jan Vevera, from the Czech Republic, where psychiatric practice is still overwhelmingly based in dated asylum. There are roughly 1000 psychiatrists serving a population of 10 million, well below the European average. Community practice is in its infancy, with out-patient services representing the only real alternative to hospital care. Trainees are paid little more than a UK teenager’s pocket money, though in relative terms they earn enough to get by. There is an ongoing debate as to who is responsible for paying trainees during their training: the medical school or the hospitals. There is a full assessment at the end of training that includes a clinical long case. Trainees also gain neurology training and usually have access to psychotherapy, as well as a clinical supervisor throughout.

Abigail Donovan was, until recently, a ‘member in training’ of the board of the American Psychiatric Association. She had been elected to this position to represent the interests of all psychiatric residents in the USA – a model very similar to the chair of the Psychiatric Trainees’ Committee (PTC) in the UK. Under the PTC, there is a strong commitment to spending most of their residency on site, on call. It was only relatively recently that a campaign was won to cut down to an 80-hour working week; this followed a scandal where the exhaustion of a trainee led to the death of a patient. Dr Donovan also lamented how finances dominate practice.

The skill of dealing with insurance companies has emerged as a key skill for psychiatry. On the plus side, there is a syllabus for training and centres are encouraged to systematically towards local and national assessments. There is also a strong US trainees’ network. Although there are many challenges to training in the UK, it is reassuring to know that, at least in some areas, things could be a lot worse!

Meinou Simmons
PTC member and specialist trainee, Cambridge