LANGUAGE AND THE TEACHER

Center for Curriculum Development. Under the editorial direction of Dr Robert C. Lugton, American Language Institute of New York University

Language and the Teacher: A Series in Applied Linguistics presents a new approach to a field that is ramifying so rapidly that no one book can adequately cover it. This is a series of short volumes, in paperback, each a self-contained book on special issues, methods and content of a basic topic, written by noted authorities who are actively contributing to that particular field. (Many of the volumes are the results of university research projects.) Overall the series will provide a coverage in depth of applied linguistics, research and application.

Television and Language Skills

R. Sherrington

£2.50

This book looks at the role of educational television today, particularly in the developing country situation. In analysing the language learning skills and discussing how these might be taught and practised through the medium of television the author argues the need for greater cooperation between television producers and the writers and sponsors of language teaching material. He also points out that television’s visual electicism makes it ideally suited to the processes of language and language learning.

Founded in 1947 as an independent forum for students of language, LINGUA has developed into one of the world’s more important linguistic periodicals.

Each bi-monthly issue contains current work on a variety of linguistic topics. Although these articles are written from different points of view, they are required to contain such general theoretical implications as to be of interest to any linguist, whatever his own specialization.

No particular linguistic theories or scientific trends are favoured; scientific quality and scholarly standing are the only criteria applied in the selection of papers accepted for publication.

Besides papers, LINGUA publishes review articles surveying developments in the various fields of linguistics, as well as occasional discussions. A considerable number of pages in each issue are devoted to critical book reviews. In addition, a ‘Publications Received’ section, systematically ordered by topic, gives a useful account of recent linguistic publications.

LINGUA is published in two volumes per year, comprising six bi-monthly issues. The subscription price for 1974, Volumes 33 and 34 is Dfl. 146.00 or US$58.50 including postage and handling. Sample copies are available on request.

Subscription orders and sample copy requests should be sent to the Publisher or to your usual supplier.

The library also includes an audio-visual section with facilities for hearing and viewing teaching materials; a register of relevant current research is available for reference.

In addition to joint publications such as Language-Teaching Abstracts and A Language-Teaching Bibliography, each centre issues publications from time to time in its own name.
